Yanks Win 5th Game; Take Series

Six Dodger Hurlers Fail As Bombers Score, 10-6

Champions Run Up Huge Early Lead; Page Fans Three in 9th; DiMag Homers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Oct. 9.—Today the Yankees did the mop-up job in the World Series.

They closed out the Bums, 10-6, and walked off with the winners' shares at the end of five games.

It was a game in which the Bums achieved complete bumhood early in the proceedings. In what was supposed to be a last-ditch stand three of their pitchers were battered for a 10-1 lead by the Yankees and there was panic in Flatbush.

And when Gil Hodges' three-run homer in the seventh did prune the Yankees' lead to four runs, it was only a dying gasp. The crowd of 33,711 Brooklyn fans were newly-dismayed at that point when the Yankees wheeled in Joe Page to replace the tiring Vic Raschi.

First Series Under Lights

This was the first World Series game in history played under lights, turned on by order of Commissioner A. B. Chandler at 4:47 p. m. in a sort of gloaming, in the eighth inning.

Page got Raschi out of his seventh-inning jam by shoving three strikes past Pinch-Hitter Luis Olmo for the third out, and then worsted 'em in the eighth and ninth. He packed three strikeouts into the ninth.

Another guy named Joe—Joe DiMaggio—also got into the act today, bolting out of the slump that had gripped him from the series' start to crash a home run into the left field seats in the fourth. On two other occasions, he was deprived of extra base hits by Snider's scintillating catches.

Pitchers' Mark Set

The Bums paraded six pitchers into the game, tying a World Series record. But Rex Barney, the starter, was the chief culprit. He walked five men, and four of them scored behind five Yankee hits in the first three innings.

Jack Banta and Carl Erskine, the immediate successors to Barney, were also ineffective. Joe Hatten, Irv Palica and Paul Minner finally checked the roistering Yanks.

Raschi, moving back into action with only two days' rest after his rough 1-0 loss in the second game, was breezing along for five innings. He was obviously fading in the sixth when the Dodgers collected their second run, and Manager Casey Stengel bore with him until Hodges' homer in the seventh.

It was the Yanks' twelfth triumph in 16 series and was the end to a brilliant year for the 58-year-old Stengel. It was Brook-

Scooter Addicts Present Blue Vehicle to Pope

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Oct. 9 (AP).—Pope Pius XII was given a bright blue motor scooter today by 700 horn-blowing scooter enthusiasts.

They scooted up to the Pope's summer residence near Rome this morning in a noisy, mile-long procession bearing their gift to the Pope.

The Pope appeared twice at a second-floor balcony to be greeted each time by a roar of motors and a squawk of horns. He blessed the scooter drivers.

The Pope expressed interest in the operation of the scooters.

The Pope's motor scooter, it was learned, will be awarded to a country mission to carry priests on duty in remote country areas.

Slashed Body Of Boy Found In Rock Creek

Deputy Coroner Lays Murder to Sadist or Pervert

The nude, slashed and broken body of an 8-year-old boy was found yesterday in Rock Creek for him.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, said that the boy had been murdered. An autopsy showed, he said, that the lad had suffered 17 stab wounds, a fractured skull, and sexual abuse, and that the death was "undoubtedly the work of a sadist or pervert."

Dr. Rosenberg said that jagged wound cuts indicated that a broken bottle or similar rough weapon had been used. Broken bottles were scattered nearby.

The boy was Harrison McKinley Walker, son of Mrs. Marie Walker, a widow, of 2454 Snow's Court nw. Snow's Court is an alley between 24th and 25th sts., and I and K sts. nw.

She said that Harrison disappeared Friday morning at recess time from the Briggs-Montgomery school, where he was in grade 3-A.

Railmen Reject Presidential Board Report

Chicago, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and enginemen tonight rejected a presidential emergency board report, but made no recommendation for a strike or a strike vote.

Instead, David B. Robertson president of the union, said that a new parley has been arranged with the Nation's railroad representatives in Chicago Tuesday.

Another union spokesman, who declined use of his name, said that "an agreement may be reached then to avert a Nation-wide strike."

The union's request for an extra fireman on diesels was turned down by the presidential board September 19. Rail workers are barred by law from walking off their jobs for 30 days after such a report is issued.

The union contended a second fireman is needed on diesel engines for safety reasons, and that more efficient diesels are knocking firemen out of jobs by cutting down the number of trains needed.

The Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen claims a membership of 110,000, representing 160 railroads.

Doctors Move For Practice Reciprocity

Virginians to Seek Legislation Ending D. C. Physician Fee

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Old Point Comfort, Va., Oct. 9.—Medical wheels were set rolling here tonight to assure Washington physicians they can practice in neighboring Virginia as freely as Virginia doctors practice there.

Dr. J. W. Love of Alexandria disclosed that a resolution has been prepared for introduction here at the House of Delegates of the Medical Society of Virginia. The resolution, he said, is directed at ending the "inequality" in practice privileges across the Potomac.

The resolution which probably will be referred to the legislative committee, will urge State legislators to change Virginia's medical licensing law. The law requires that out-of-State physicians pay a $50 fee to practice in Virginia.

Just what legislative mechanics will accomplish the feat have not yet been decided, Dr. Love said. If possible, he said, the matter might be worked out through the State legislative committee on interstate coordination. In all probability, he added, any measure proposed will be for a reciprocal agreement between Washington and Virginia only.

The District of Columbia permits Virginia doctors to treat their patients in Washington hospitals or homes on certification with a $1 "borderline certificate." The certificate, once obtained, is good indefinitely and for any number of

Intruder Gets Into Apartment Of King George

London, Sept. 9 (U.P.).—Slipping past a supposedly foolproof burglar alarm, a strange man stole into Buckingham Palace early Sunday and successfully evaded the royal sentries for 90 minutes.

Roused by the scream of a maid, the sentries searched through the vast palace before discovering him, huddled in a bed, at 3 a. m.

Police would not identify the man. They have him under medical observation.

Police believed he climbed the 10-foot brick wall and clambered over the massive iron spiking surrounding the home of Britain's royal family at a spot about 25 yards from the nearest sentry.

He entered a room where a maid was sleeping and, disturbed by the noise, she rose to switch on the light. The man threw himself flat on the floor. She stepped on him and her shriek woke other maids who called the sentries.

Fall's 84 Heat Refills Parks, Even Puts Swimmers in River

The calendar said fall yesterday, but the sun sent the mercury up to 84, pushed swimmers back into the Potomac and turned on air-conditioning units in downtown theaters, hotels and restaurants.

The official cause of the balmy Sunday was given as "a paucity of polar outbreaks" by the U. S. Weather Bureau. Translated, that means no cold air has moved down from the north during the past week, as it usually does every two or three days at this time of the year.

Yesterday's high of 84 fell 6 degrees short of the record for October 9, set in 1939.

The weatherman predicted "two or three" more days of unusually mild weather with the temperature at least equalling today's 84. The record for October 10 is 92, also set in 1939.

Park police reported unusually large crowds in Rock Creek and Potomac Parks. Two members of the Washington Canoe Club went swimming just below the Key Bridge.

Sunday drivers, taking their first look at the new Whitehurst Freeway, got a better look than they bargained for when an accident on the Key Bridge backed traffic up as far as Rock Creek pkwy.

Officials at the Zoo also reported an unusually large October crowd.

Moves Begun To Dislodge DP Measure

Push to Get Bill Out of Committee Spurred by Quick Adjournment Hope

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Twin moves to dislodge the displaced persons bill from the Senate Judiciary Committee developed last night as Congress entered the adjournment stretch:

1. Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) said he will move for discharge of the subcommittee handling the legislation when the full Judiciary Committee meets today.

2. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said that if the committee fails to act he will call up in the Senate today or Tuesday a petition to discharge the committee from further consideration of the House-passed bill.

The bipartisan efforts to bring the bill before the Senate promised to wind up in a touch-and-go floor fight.

One of Last "Musts"

The DP legislation is one of the last "must" measures on the Senate list. If no filibuster develops, leaders said they thought they could dispose of it in time to adjourn Congress this weekend.

These other major controversies, however, further complicated the adjournment drive:

A split between House and Senate conferees on whether to clear a House-approved 58-group Air Force or the 48 groups approved by the Senate. The issue will go to another House vote today.

A House-Senate conference tug-of-war between the Senate-approved sliding scale farm parity formula and the rigid 90 percent farm price supports passed by the House.

Chairman Asks More Time

The Senate bi-partisan efforts to free the displaced persons bill from the Judiciary Committee were renewed despite a cabled plea from Judiciary Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) for more time to study the issue.

After weeks of hearings, McCarran left for Europe recently with the bill still high and dry in his committee. On Friday, through Acting Subcommittee Chairman Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), he asked and obtained another three weeks leave.

O'Conor read a message from McCarran charging "fraud" in the administration of the DP law and saying it would be a "serious mistake" to pass the House version of the bill. McCarran's statement added: "That is the expression of Connally Warns Row Perils U. S.

Senator 'Regrets' Service Squabble At 'Critical' Time In World History

By Coleman B. Jones
NYHT News Service

Hope for an "early peace" in the bitter controversy among the armed services over basic defense strategy and their respective roles in safeguarding the national security was expressed yesterday by Senator Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

His view, in the interest of global peace, was expressed to newsmen as Representative Vinson (D., Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, prepared for "another week, at least" of its public probing into the long-smouldering differences between the Navy and Air Force.

Expresses "Regret"

The Navy was prepared to send before the committee a group of its experts to back up the blast let loose before it Friday by Admiral Arthur W. Radford against the "atomic blitz" theory of warfare epitomized by the Air Force's emphasis on the B-36 "intercontinental" bomber.

Senator Connally avoided any impression of taking sides in the Navy-Air Force controversy, but expressed "regret" at the public squabbling between the two services. He said it was weakening the Nation's position in world affairs at a "critical moment in history."

An "early peace" in such interservice conflicts is necessary, he felt, to prevent them from lessening the Government's effectiveness in its efforts to maintain peace throughout the world.

Expected to Back Radford

The Navy's technical experts expected this week to back up Admiral Radford's conclusion that the Air Force's B-36 program, based on its theory of long-range strategic atomic warfare, is "a billion-dollar blunder," include:

Lieut. Comdr. E. W. Harrison, radar expert; Comdr. W. N. Leonard, jet power authority; Comdr. W. I. Martin, night-fighter expert; Comdr. A. B. Metsger, to detail naval fighter plane capabilities; Comdr. Eugene Tatom, on bombing accuracy; and Capt. J. H. Sides, Naval authority on guided missiles.

Their testimony will supplement that given Saturday by Capt. Frederick Mackay Trapnell, commander of the Naval Air Test Center at Patuxent River, Md., who challenged Air Force claims the 10,000-mile bomber can fly so high it is virtually invulnerable to detec-

A black corset kept Pierre Cilion in line

Dover, England, Oct. 9 (AP).—Pierre, the California sea lion, flippered across the English Channel today in the smashing time of just over 5 hours.

The newest Channel swimmer made his bid for fame as part of a stunt for the radio program, "Truth or Consequences." Condemned to assist in managing the venture was Burt Kennedy, who missed a question in a States-side quiz.

Pierre, whose full name is Pierre Cilion, and whose address is California, plunged gleefully into the cold surf at Cape Griz Nez at 9:36 a. m., Greenwich mean time, and flipped onto the pebbly beach east of St. Margarets Bay at 2:40 p. m.

Only 18 months old, Pierre thus is the youngest Channel swimmer and the fastest. The swiftest crossing by man is a little over 11 hours.

To Continue Coalition

2 Anti-Communist Parties Get Majority of Austria Vote

Vienna, (Monday) Oct. 10 (AP).—The two anti-Communist parties making up Austria's present coalition government won a big majority on the basis of unofficial returns covering two thirds of the registered vote in yesterday's national election.

A new party, drawing its support from former Nazis, in a surprise development ranked third, with the Communists trailing in fourth place.

This was the first national election since 1945.

On the basis of the latest unofficial count early today, Chancellor Leopold Figl's Rightist People's Party had 45 percent of the 4,500,000 registered vote, the strongly anti-Communist Socialists 36.5, the extreme Rightist League of Independents 13 percent and the Communists 5.5 percent.

Reds Nearing Canton

Chiang Says Soviet Aggression Has Set Off World War III

Hongkong, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today said World War III already had started with Russia's "direct participation in an aggressive war against China."

He warned in a Formosa speech released here by the Central News Agency "Russian aggression" cannot be stopped unless the democracies take action for collective security.

As he spoke Chinese Communist armies plunged spearheads to within 50 or 60 miles of Canton as the Nationalist government prepared again to flee to Chungking.

Chiang criticized the United States for "failing to understand the true situation" and warned that the "United States cannot evade her international responsibility."

He appealed indirectly for United States help and said that suppressing the Communist rebellion against his government would help to curb Russian aggression.

In a message marking the thirty-eighth anniversary of the overthrow of the Manchu regime, October 10, Chiang flatly accused Russia of backing the Chinese Communists and said this "signifies her direct participation in an aggressive war against China. In other words, World War III has already begun."

He reminded that a fourth of its population would be living behind the Iron Curtain with "Russian conquest of China."

"Soviet expansion would be a calamity to mankind," he said.

He called the new Communist government of China a "puppet directed by Russia" and linked it with creation of the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo, which

Harvard to Admit Women Next Year To Its Law School

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 9 (AP).—Harvard Law School will admit women students for the first time next year, Dean Erwin N. Griswold said tonight.

Only a "small number" graduated from accredited colleges, will be eligible, he said.

"Opportunities for women in the law still are limited, however, and the faculty is well aware that many able men are turned away from our doors every year," Griswold added.

The 132-year-old Harvard Law School is one of the last law schools in the country to let down the bars to women.

As a result of its decision, all branches of higher scholarship at Harvard now are open to them.

Soviet to End State of War In East Zone

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Oct. 9 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union, in a statement Tuesday to the new East German government, will declare an end to the legal state of war between Germany and the Soviet Union, it was reliably reported today.

This fits in with growing evidence the Russians will fulfill promises of a peace treaty and removal of occupation troops within a year thereafter.

An increasing number of high western officials here have in the past few days come to the conclusion that a token departure of Soviet occupation troops in 1950 is a decided probability and the conclusion of a separate peace treaty between Russia and eastern Germany may take place before Christmas.

Labor Government Faces Poll Test Today in Norway

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—An estimated 1,500,000 Norwegians will go to the polls Monday to decide whether to keep their Labor government in power for four more years.

The Labor Party, which has a one-seat majority in the present Parliament, was expected to make a good showing, but the second-place Conservatives were expected to register gains which might deprive Labor of its unquestioned command.

Most observers believed that the Communists, who won 11 seats in the 150-member Parliament elected in 1945, would lose ground.

7000 Miners Walk Out

Reds' Strikes Hinder Moch In Effort to Revive Coalition

Paris, Oct. 9 (AP).—Communist-led strikes today threatened to add to the troubles of Interior Minister Jules Moch in his attempt to put France's middle-of-the road coalition government back together again.

Some 7000 coal miners in the Loire valley went on strike Saturday for 24 hours in the more important coal and industrial areas of northern France there were scattered strikes in textile and metals industries as well as the mines. Monday will tell whether the strikes will come to an end or will spread.

The strikes started when Victorien Duguet, chief of the pro-Communist Miner's Union, urged the miners to "action" as the only way of winning their demands for more pay.

The busy Moch was delegated by ailing President Vincent Auriol to try for general approval among coalition party leaders of a common government program. Tonight he was forced to add a group of labor chiefs to his list of visitors.

Earlier today he had been in conference with leaders of the three principal groups of the coalition—his own Socialists, the Catholic-led Popular Republicans (MRP) and the Radical Socialists. These three held together for more than a year until Premier Henri Queuille, a Radical Socialist, was

Reciprocal Tariff Cuts Set by U. S., 10 Others

Accord Is Reached In Annecy Talks; Italy Is Major Nation Involved

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

For the second time in two years the United States has agreed to cut its tariffs on hundreds of foreign products in return for lower foreign duties on American goods.

A new series of tariff-cutting agreements with 10 countries was announced by the State Department last night after long and complex negotiations at Annecy, France.

When the agreements come into effect next year, the United States will reduce its customs duties on goods it bought last year to a value of 212 million dollars.

Italy Most Important

Italy is the most important trading country of the 10 directly involved. The others are Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Greece, Uruguay, Nicaragua, Haiti, the Dominican Republic and Liberia.

Some of the 10 will get a double advantage because they devalued their currencies last month, Sweden and Denmark by as much as 30½ percent. The combination of lower tariffs and cheaper currencies should cheapen the prices of their goods in the American market.

The individual items affected by the new trade agreements, and the depth of the tariff cut on each will not be disclosed until today. Judging from advance indications, the new schedules should benefit Italian textiles and leather goods, Swedish glassware, paper and high-grade steel, Italian and Greek olive oil, Greek tobacco (for use in blending American cigarettes) and Caribbean sugar.

Should Help Others

Indirectly, the new tariff reductions should help more countries than the 10 directly involved, for tariffs are levied on types of goods rather than on countries, and a tariff concession made to one country applies to the same products from all.

The new direct concessions cover only about three percent of America's total purchase from abroad. Still officials can point to them as the second instalment of a continuing tariff-cutting trend and as proof that the United States is trying to lower its formidable barriers to foreign goods.

In 1947, after difficult negotiations in Geneva, the United States made agreements with 22 countries which reduced American tariffs on about 3500 separate items, and won matching reductions for American goods abroad.

Before the Geneva agreements the United States collected in customs duties about 25.5 percent of the total value of all dutiable foreign goods imported. The Geneva rates brought the proportion down to an estimated 20 percent.

Now a second set of agreements will carry the process a stage farther, and still other negotiations

Bevan Announces Early Election; Silent on Date

Byker-on-Tyne, England, Oct. 9 (AP).—Health Minister Aneurin Bevan, leader of British Labor's left wing, said today a general election will be held "in a very short time on a date I don't propose to mention."

It was the first indication from a ministerial level the voting may be imminent.

"The country will be asked to give its verdict on what has been done," Bevan told a political meeting here.

He urged voters to think of politics in terms of principles, not personalities, and added:

"The conflict in 1949 is not between a group of Conservatives and Socialists but between two sets of principals which are being discussed, not only in Great Britain but in every country in the world. . . ."

Informed sources said Prime Minister Attlee has already discussed election prospects with the cabinet at least once. He and Herbert Morrison, the party's political boss, were said to be leaning in favor of waiting until next spring.

Dismantling Plan In Germany Hit

Before U.N.

A-Energy Control Clash Seen

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Clashing East and West views on the international control of atomic energy soon will be made "quite clear" to the United Nations, Chairman L. B. Pearson of the Canadian U. N. delegation said tonight.

On the eve of U. N. consideration of the difficult and dangerous problem, Pearson promised a "pretty thorough airing" of arguments from both sides.

He did not hint at any possible compromise by either side in his remarks on the Columbia Broadcasting System radio program, "U. N. in Action."

"We think there has been a pretty effective plan for international control already worked out, and that is the plan of the majority of the Security Council and the Atomic Energy Commission, Pearson said.

But the Soviets will not accept the plan because they consider it "unwarranted interference in their sovereignty" and because they feel "the control measures are too rigid," he said.

The East and West will debate the problem extensively this week in three separate U. N. bodies—the Security Council, the General Assembly Political Committee and the private committee of the "Big Six" atom powers.

The week's atomic debate probably will get under way Tuesday, when Russia has promised the Security Council some new proposals on control of world armaments.

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 9 (AP).—U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy said tonight he does not favor an end of Allied dismantling "unless and until guarantees as to security and reparation can be given by Germany sufficiently strong to justify it."

In a prepared statement, McCloy said the question of dismantling is not in the hands of the Allied high commissioners but is a governmental matter. He added the governments involved have already stated their position on dismantling. McCloy said his statement was made in reply to inquiries on the question.

He declared it a highly technical subject in which a detailed study is required.

"My colleagues views are their own and I would not attempt naturally to express them or to imply them. Certainly I have had no intimations from either of them that their views toward dismantling differ in the slightest degree from those of their governments."

The British and French are going ahead with their dismantling, and British officials said they expected to be finished by the end of 1950.

McCloy's statement followed publication in German newspapers today of an interview attributed to him. In it, McCloy was quoted as having recommended creation of international military control over Ruhr industry in place of dismantling. Such a control he was quoted as having said, would prevent reestablishment of war industries.

McCloy also was represented in the story as having described dismantling as a "lost cause."

McCloy's office said he had made no statements for publication, but later said he had talked off the record to an International News Service representative.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, addressing a Hamburg meeting, quoted a "recent interview" by McCloy on dismantling, and said Germans could well ascribe themselves to these views. He did not specify the interview, but his party officials said he referred to the dismantling story carried by German newspapers today.

With Albania

Greeks Seen Factor in Tito Pact

Belgrade, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—The Communist Party organ Borba said today that failure of Albania to follow Russia in breaking its pact of friendship and mutual assistance with Yugoslavia was a special kind of "machination" by the Kremlin.

"The breaking of the Soviet-Yugoslav pact and of other treaties which link the peoples of Eastern Europe with our country did not come as a surprise," Borba said.

"The only thing that is strange is that the Albanian government which until now led in the breaking of its ties with Yugoslavia has not formally renounced the treaty of friendship and mutual assistance.

"However even that is a machination of a special kind directed against Yugoslavia by the Albanian clique and those who give it orders to which Yugoslavia will answer when the appropriate time comes."

Observers believed this referred to the dangers of Greek rebels now in Albania provoking Greek government troops into action.

Under the present pact, Albania could invoke the section calling upon Yugoslavia to give all possible aid including military support against any incursions by Athens troops.

The Yugoslavs might then be involved in hostilities with Greece or suffer a propaganda loss in Eastern Europe by refusing the Albanian appeal.

West Berlin's Needs Placed At ¼ Billion

Berlin, Oct. 9 (AP).—West Berlin was hurt so much by the Russian blockade that only a quarter-billion-dollar loan can revive industry and finance. This is the conclusion reached today by American, British and French experts.

This sum is entirely separate from the half-billion dollars most economists here calculate as the primary cost of the Allied airlift and other measures taken to keep Berlin alive during during the Soviet squeeze of 1948-49.

The conclusion is based on a survey of 5000 industrial firms in the three Western sectors of the city.

The findings were established by a special tri-power committee and were explained in detail to ECA representatives. The extent of ECA aid to West Berlin will depend largely on this survey.

Aid to the anti-Communist sectors of Berlin has been promised.

Rightwing Parties Win

Socialists agreed to continue their coalition if they won.

The corresponding percentages received four years ago was 49 for the People's Party, 46 for the Socialists, and 5 for the Communists. The League of Independents, which depended largely on amnestied former Nazis for its support, was not permitted to vote in 1945.

At 4 a. m. (local time) the popular vote was: People's Party, 857,226; Socialists, 615,778; "Independents," 199,891; Communists, 66,883.

On the basis of unofficial returns for 139 election districts, the People's Party held 71 seats, the Socialists 66, the League 10, and the Communists 2 in the lower chamber. This left 26 of the 165 districts still to be heard from.

In the 1945 elections the People's Party won 85 seats, the Socialists 76, and the Communists 4.

The Ministry of Interior said that of 4,391,815 eligible voters, 3,952,000, or about 90 percent, went to the polls, or 4 percent fewer than in 1945.

The Russian occupation zone province of Burgenland, which borders on Hungary, gave the Communists only 4715 of a total of 182,361 votes. The People's Party received 85,565, the Socialists 65,712 and the League 6369.

Russians to End State of War policy will be made Tuesday to the East Zone Parliament by Ambassador W. S. Semeonov, who is to be accredited as the senior Russian representative to the new regime.

The Soviet Union already has prepared the excuse for signing a separate peace with Germany. According to Russian propaganda "imperialist activities" of the Western Allies are forcing the Soviet Union to dissociate itself from these policies and go ahead on its own in dealing with Germany.

It is expected the Russians in their Tuesday declaration will say the east sector of Berlin will not be formally included in the east zone parliament so long as the western part of Berlin is not formally included in the west German regime.

Despite west Berlin's strong desire to become a formal part of western Germany, the Allies have hesitated to grant this request. They fear dissolving the four-power status of the city might give the eastern German regime excuses for taking new action against the western allies, such as demanding Soviet clearance for western personnel, since the city is 100 miles within the Soviet zone.

Removal of Russian troops would be an excellent propaganda weapon against continued presence in western Germany of American, British and French forces. The Russians hope the western Germans will demand departure of western Allied forces from their own territory.

AFL Urges Vigorous Policy on Pacific

By Raymond J. Blair

St. Paul, Oct. 9 (NYHT).—A "vigorous" American policy in the Pacific, including immediate resumption of military and economic aid to non-Communist China, the fostering of democratic republics in Asia and prompt action on forming an anti-Communist Pacific pact, was recommended today by the American Federation of Labor.

The proposals were contained in a report of the AFL's international labor relations committee, headed by Matthew Woll of New York, which is considered sure to be approved by the convention Monday.

Another feature of Monday's session, expected to be the final one, will be an address by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson, understood to contain a reply to Navy critics of unification.

"Just as we called a halt to the Nipponese imperialist drive . . . so must we now do everything in our power to prevent the Russian expansionists from imposing Soviet imperialism on the awakened spirits and suffering bodies of the peoples of Asia," the international report said.

Then it laid down a seven-point Asian program for this country:

1. Have the United States Government invite a Chinese mission, representative of all democratic forces in China and headed by acting President Li Tsung-jen, and in cooperation with this mission develop plans for "immediate effective aid to strengthen economically and militarily the democratic and labor forces of China."

2. Have this Government give all possible support to the Chinese delegation in presenting its case against Russia at the United Nations.

3. Keep "imperialist hands" off Asia and promote creation of new free republics.

4. Support the Asian relations conference called by India to unite the free nations of Asia.

5. Give prompt support to a Pacific pact.

6. Refuse diplomatic and commercial relations with the Chinese Communists.

7. Appoint a special commission, on which labor would be represented, to work out in cooperation with Asian authorities the application to Asia of President Truman's Point IV plan, designed to develop backward areas.

The report noted that the recent Russian atomic explosion "violently contracted the peaceful world" and warned again "attempts to revive a policy of appeasement" of Russia.

AFL Releases Book On Soviet Slave Labor

Evidence on forced labor in the Soviet Union, previously submitted to the United Nations, was released yesterday in book form by the American Federation of Labor at its St. Paul convention.

The book, "Slave Labor in Russia," is a compliation of documentary evidence of slave labor and labor camps in the Soviet. The material was presented to the United Nations Economic and Social Council last February. It includes a timely discussion of how forced labor mined the uranium used by the Soviet in atomic bomb experiments.

Indian Group Asks Truman to Veto Navajo-Hopi Bill

By The Associated Press

The Association of American Indian Affairs asked President Truman today to veto the 88-million-dollar Navajo-Hopi rehabilitation bill.

It urged the President, however, to "save the substance" of the 10-year Navajo-Hopi rehabilitation program and to call for enough funds to carry it through its first year.

The recommendations were contained in a 2000-word letter to President Truman from the association president, writer Oliver La Farge, Santa Fe, N. Mex.

he said was one of the causes of World War II.

He admitted the Nationalists were fighting a losing fight.

Reports from the front disclosed the Communists had swept around the government's defense line at Yingtak, 72 airline miles north of Canton. In a rapid drive the Communists had hoped would carry them into Canton Monday—anniversary of the republic.

A government spokesman denied the Communists had captured Pakanghou, 45 miles north of Canton, or Tsingyun, 40 miles to the northeast. Communists were reported attacking Fatkang, 53 miles to the northeast.

Nationalist Ship Mutinies, Freeing U. S. Freighter

Pusan, Korea, Oct. 9 (AP).—The crew of an American blockade runner reported on arrival here at midnight that their ship got safely into Red Shanghai because a Chinese Nationalist warship surrendered to the Communists.

The Isbrandtsen liner Flying Independent and its sister ship, the Flying Clipper, later were detained for a week by the Nationalists when they came out of Shanghai, but finally were released Thursday.

The Flying Independent's chief electrician, Howard Landbecker of New York, said a Nationalist destroyer-escort detained the ship briefly and then went up the Whangpoo under a white flag and surrendered to the Reds. He said it was learned the crew had shot the captain and thrown his body overboard.

Peace Hopes Faint in Coal, Fainter in Steel as Costs Mount

Pittsburgh, Oct. 9 (AP).—This is a week of decision in the Nation's strike-troubled steel and coal industries.

There is at least a chance for peace in coal, however dim it may be. But there is nothing to indicate such hopes for steel.

More definite is the prospect of walkouts swelling the strike idle to two million. Aluminum and steel fabricating plants may join the strike parade.

The cost to strikers and industry in the country's first double-header steel-coal walkout in history passes the 400-million-dollar mark, regardless.

1. United Mine Workers Chief John L. Lewis and the coal operators go back to the bargaining table Wednesday with orders from the Federal Government to hurry up and settle the 21-day-old strike idling 380,000 bituminous diggers.

2. The eight-day-old basic steel strike of 454,000 CIO United Steelworkers threatens to spread to the fabricating companies which employ 500,000 of the union's members. The fabricating contracts start running out Saturday. The fabricators, who make everything from refrigerators to hairpins, buy their raw materials from the basic steel companies.

3. A strike at midnight October 17 faces the giant Aluminum Company of America unless it reaches a contract with the steelworkers for its 20,000 workers.

The steelworker demands against steel, the fabricators and aluminum are more or less the same. They want company paid pensions and insurance.

The steelworkers also want a wage increase from Alcoa. The union dropped wage demands against steel after the President's fact-finding board vetoed an increase in favor of free insurance and pensions.

Steelworker and CIO President Philip Murray will take a leaf from the U. S. Steel Corp. and present his case to the public.

The CIO plans to make use of radio and personal pep talks by President Murray. He has speeches scheduled in major steel cities.

The tour starts Tuesday at Youngstown, Ohio.

Murray also will speak on a Nation-wide radio broadcast (ABC) on Wednesday at 8:15 p. m.

So far eight steel companies, employing 11,450, have agreed to Murray's terms. His price for peace is complete acceptance of the Presidential fact-finding board recommendation that companies give 6 cents for pensions and 4 cents for insurance.

All is quiet on the steel front. There is no indication whether the Government will try its hand again at settling the strike which it succeeded in delaying three times.

The status quo also prevailed in the soft coal fields as the strike went into the fourth week.

U.S. and 10 Others Agree to Cut Tariffs

for a "third round" of reciprocal tariff cuts are expected to start next year.

The newly announced agreements with 10 countries were negotiated at Annecy, between April and August of this year. All of the 10 countries, in turn, made new agreements with one another and with 21 of the countries that signed the Geneva agreements in 1947.

Representatives of the Geneva and the Annecy groups together will sign formal documents today at Lake Success, N. Y., the headquarters of the United Nations, embodying the results of the long negotiations.

The American delegates at Annecy in 1949, as at Geneva in 1947, negotiated under the authority of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. This act, a part of American foreign policy since 1934, empowers the President to cut tariffs by as much as 50 percent on any item in return for concessions from other countries.

The Annecy agreements were made possible when the present Congress voted, after prolonged and sometimes bitter debate, to extend the act for two years.

The concessions made at Annecy were by no means one-sided. The other negotiating countries agreed to lower their tariffs on goods which they imported from the United States in 1947 to a value of $536,997,000, or nearly 39 percent of all they imported from the United States in that year.

For the foreseeable future, however, the advantages of these concessions to American exporters are more apparent than real.

All but three of the countries represented at Annecy—Haiti, the Dominican Republic and Liberia—still control their imports by quotas and licenses because they are short of dollars. Italy recently removed quotas on a large proportion of her imports, but only on those from nondollar areas.

So, regardless of tariff concessions, many American exports at present cannot get into the countries whose governments made trade agreements at Annecy.

The American official hope is that by opening the American market more widely, and by enabling the foreign countries to earn dollars here, the Annecy agreements will help to remedy the foreign dollar shortage and will remove some of the need for import quotas in the future.

The official list of American products which will benefit—some day—from the new tariff agreements includes:

Grains, fruits, dairy products, cotton, tobacco, automobiles, aircraft, tractors, machinery, petroleum products, "certain types" of glassware; plumbing equipment, chemicals, textiles and furs, rubber and leather products, and many others.

ed his swim after a breakfast of herring.

Now and then his handlers tossed out 1 of the 35 herring, weighing about 15 pounds in all, which they had brought along, and Pierre lunched as he swam.

He seemed to think it was fun and there still was a lot of swimming in him when he reached shore.

The waves were both long and choppy and the boats convoying Pierre bobbed about violently. About 20 news correspondents and photographers rode in two motorboats and half of them were very seasick.

Also, about half of them were without pants. That was because it was a rugged embarkation at Cap Gris Nez. The correspondents had to take off their pants and wade for it. Then water splashed into the boats and made the pants too wet to wear.

Kennedy, a free lance writer, will return to Hollywood Monday by plane. The radio program will reward him with a dollar for every minute Pierre clipped from the record, or about $360.

Pierre will return to California Saturday by plane.

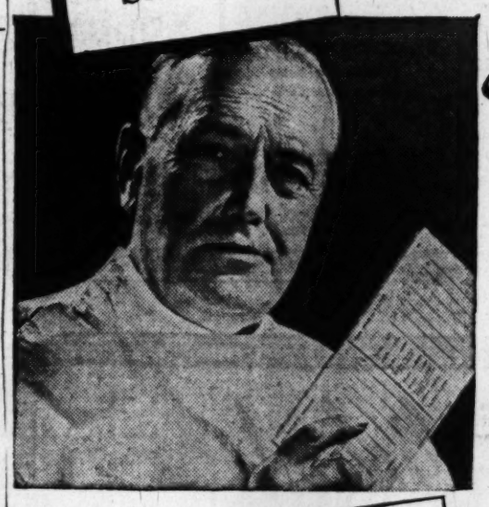
THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT on 30-Day Test of Camel Smokers...



NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

YES, these were the findings of noted throat specialists after a total of 2,470 weekly examinations of the throats of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days.

All the smokers in this nationwide test averaged from 1 to 2 packages of Camels per day. Their throats were carefully examined each week. And from coast to coast, the reports of the doctors were the same: NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

SMOKERS THEMSELVES REPORT!

"Did I enjoy the test?" asks secretary Sylvia MacNeill. "I never knew a cigarette could be so tasty and mild!"

Noted archer Howard Hill: "Camel mildness is a familiar story to me. I've smoked Camels for years. A great cigarette!"

Famed skier Georgette Miller: "My first pack of Camels won me over! I never smoked a cigarette so mild!"

Vic Scott, outboard racer: "I go right along with those doctors' reports. By my test, Camels sure are mild!"

Mary L. Walsh, saleswoman: "I like a mild cigarette. Camels are the mildest cigarette I ever smoked!"

"I'm a Camel smoker. For a milder, better-tasting cigarette, Camel is the answer!" Steel worker Cyril Byrne.

Bank teller Cecelia Garland made her own 30-Day Test. "It certainly proved Camel mildness to me", she reports.

"My 30-Day Test steered me right. Camels are mild — they've got the flavor!" Bill Holland, auto-racing champion.

"Camels taste so good—I was thrilled to find them mild and cool." Mrs. Llewellyn Lord, Jr., socialite.

"I've tried many brands. There's no cigarette like a Camel. They're a real smoke!" R. M. Elliot, merchandiser.

"Every puff of my 30-Day Test was enjoyable! Camels have a flavor that is always welcome." Doris Reilly, housewife.

IT'S FUN! Smoke Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days. Compare them in your "T-Zone" (T for taste, T for throat). See if you don't agree that Camels are the mildest, best-tasting cigarette you ever smoked...that smoking is fun when you smoke Camels!
I ENJOYED EVERY PUFF OF MY CAMEL 30-DAY TEST! I DIDN'T NEED MY DOCTOR'S REPORT TO KNOW THAT CAMELS ARE WONDERFULLY MILD!

It's More Than a Vision to Denny

3 Pals Get Polio Patient Television Set

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

When a feller needs a friend and he finds three of them who help him without even being asked, it makes a feller feel pretty good.

The "feller" in this case was 14-year-old Dennison Moore, 5134 Cathedral ave. nw., who nine weeks ago was stricken with polio.

Facing several months of tedious convalescence at Georgetown Hospital, Denny's spirits were understandably low.

Unknown to him, three pals in his neighborhood were working toward improving Denny's morale.

Dickie Thomas, 16, of 5015 Cathedral ave. nw., his brother Eddie, and "Bunky" Reid, 17, of 5028 Cathedral ave. nw., made a whirlwind door-to-door canvass of their neighborhood.

The result was a $200 fund, made up largely of $1 and $2 contributions from friends or acquaintances of Denny's.

Yesterday the four pals, Denny on a hospital bed and the other three seated in reserved seats, watched the World Series game at the hospital on the television set purchased with the $200 collection.

Denny and the set were moved from his room to a larger one for the occasion, which gave several other patients a chance to see the show, too.

Surprised by the publicity they were going to get, the four pals had little to say about the whole affair.

"Well," said Bunky, "you can say we've been getting a lot out of the set, too. We come up here all the time, and we've seen the whole World Series."

Denny, who has played baseball and football with his three friends at the Georgetown Boys Club and around the neighborhood, just grinned.

He hopes to be out in a couple of months.

Legion of Decency Removes Ban on Film, 'The Outlaw'

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Legion of Decency has removed the Howard Hughes-Jane Russell film "The Outlaw" from its condemned list, but still classifies it as "morally objectionable in part."

"Although revisions have been made in this film, it still presents immodest costuming and suggestive situations," the Legion, a Catholic organization, said in a statement tonight.

In Los Angeles, Producer Hughes said he had agreed after more than a year of discussion to make "certain changes," which he did not describe, in the picture.

Boy, 8, Found Murdered

She had not seen him after that time.

Mrs. Walker said that the boy on one previous occasion had disappeared from home for two days, and for shorter periods at other times. Saturday night, she said, she began to search the neighborhood for him, and at 6:55 a. m., yesterday, went to the Third Precinct station to enlist aid of police.

About noon, police said, an older brother, William, 12, found Harsison's clothing on a footpath under the Pennsylvania ave. bridge where it crosses Rock Creek pkwy. and Rock Creek. This is in the locality of 27th st., and Pennsylvania ave. nw. The clothing was about 15 to 20 feet above the water level of the creek.

This find led Third Precinct police to call in aid of Park Police in the search.

Shortly before 2 p.m., Park Police Pvt. J. J. Conlin was exploring beneath another bridge, about 125 yards south of where the clothing was found, with Alexander Hooks, 24, of 821 23d st. nw., a friend of the Walker family. Conlin spotted the body face-down in the water. The bridge where the boy was found is a low, level one which carries the parkway across Rock Creek and is east of the Federal power plant.

The two summoned Park Police Pvt. Clement Warrener and Third Precinct Pvt. Howard Dudley, who were nearby, and they removed the body from the water.

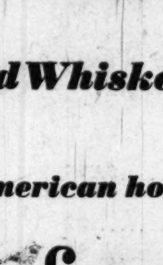
Later, police making a concentrated search of the area, found a pool of blood on rocks alongside the creek, about 50 feet downstream from where the clothing was found, but several hundred feet upstream from where the body was recovered.

The body was removed to the District Morgue where Dr. Rosenberg began his autopsy immediately. He found that the boy had been stabbed on the top of the head, in both eyes, in the cheek, in the throat, on the right side and in the abdomen. His liver had been punctured. His skull had four fractures.

As Dr. Rosenberg reported his autopsy findings to police, a call immediately went out for additional manpower to work on the case.

Inspector Robert Bryant, chief of Metropolitan Police detectives, came to headquarters to take personal charge of the manhunt. Sex squad detectives were called in, and Park police assigned extra men.

All off-duty detectives from the Third Precinct and all uniformed men of that precinct who normally walk beats in the area were called in, and five off-duty homicide squad detectives were summoned.



Harrison

They began a house-to-house search of the area attempting to obtain trace of Harrison's movements after he left school Friday morning.

Dr. Rosenberg said that death could have occurred anywhere from 12 to 36 hours previous to discovery of the body. He said its condition precluded any closer determination.

Mrs. Walker told police that last spring Harrison disappeared for two days. When he returned, she said, he brought with him a boy she knew only as "Tony." He son told her, she said, that he had been at Tony's home in Rosslyn. On later and shorter disappearances, she said, he told her he had been with other boys and at Tony's home in Rosslyn. Police were attempting to find Tony.

Mrs. Walker, who is 37, was widowed several months ago. She lives on public assistance, with her seven other children. They are William, 12; Charles, 7; Yvone, 5; Ann, 4; James, 3; Sherwood, 18 months, and Shirley, 7 months.

She was unable to give investigating officers any definite leads in the case, except for the story about the boy, Tony, who, she said, was about the same age as her victimson.

The scene of the death was on the east side of Rock Creek, about 30 yards from Rock Creek pkwy., one of the most heavily traveled parkways in the city.

CIO Backs Truman in Olds Fight

By the United Press

The CIO yesterday threw its support behind President Truman's drive to get Leland Olds confirmed for a third term on the Federal Power Commission.

In a letter to all members of the Senate, CIO President Philip Murray urged the legislators to vote for Olds and "thwart the efforts of the private power lobby."

He said "these interests" stand to gain a possible eight billion dollars through increased value of natural gas reserves if Olds is defeated.

"Because he has so convincingly proven his determination and capacity to protect the public interests," Murray said, "these industries now seek to besmirch his character, to impung his loyalty and to becloud the issue."

The real issue, he said, is whether the oil companies will be free to charge what they want for natural gas or whether the Federal Government will maintain regulatory powers over the prices.

Olds has run up against stiff opposition during Senate consideration of his nomination. A Commerce Subcommittee voted unanimously against Olds and the full committee backed up that decision by recommending that the Senate reject him. The full Senate is expected to vote on the nomination this week.

Maryland League Unit Favors Olds

The Sixth District Committee of the Maryland League, a labor-civic organization, yesterday went on record as supporting the reappointment of Leland Olds as Federal Power Commissioner.

Negro Test Suit Opens Today

Baltimore, Oct. 9 (AP). — Esther McCready, 18-year-old Negro, goes into court Monday to try to compel the University of Maryland to admit her to its School of Nursing.

The State of Maryland opposes her suit on the grounds it does not coincide with the Negro education plans under the recent compact of 11 Southern States.

The agreement holds that Negro students should attend Negro schools whenever a school meets their needs in any of the 11 States. It calls also for support of such schools.

Accordingly, the State recommended that Miss McCready attend Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn., which under the compact is one of the schools supported by the States.

Her lawyers, however, filed papers attacking the arrangement as a "direct refusal of the State of Maryland to assume the clear and constitutional obligations" which would require the girl to be admitted to the University of Maryland.

The case will be tried before Chief Judge W. Conwell Smith in Baltimore City Court. Court officials were told it will be treated as a test case and will be pushed for prompt hearings in the lower and higher courts.

Five similar cases are pending.

Economic Group Of U. N. in Israel For Refugee Study

Jaffa-Tel Aviv, Oct. 9 (NYHT).—The United Nations economic survey group arrived by plane at Lydda this afternoon.

Gordon Clapp, chairman of the mission, and a dozen aides were greeted by a small police detachment and Dr. Gershon Meron, representing the Foreign Ministry.

Clapp expressed his intention to "explore with the Israeli government" the question of Arab refugee resettlement and economic assistance to the Middle East.

Clapp dined tonight with Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett and Monday will meet with the Israeli delegation. He expects to return Tuesday to Beirut.

There have been scare headlines in newspapers here concerning threats to the lives of Clapp and his aides and the meeting place will be "secret" until the session is concluded "for security reasons."

Book Details Long History Of Rockville

By James Graham
Post Reporter

Rockville, county seat of Montgomery County, has a history of public action antedating the American Revolution.

It was in Hungerford's Tavern, as the community was then known, that freemen of the county gathered on June 11, 1774, to resist the blockade of Boston by the British.

All this is in a history of Rockville which came off the presses last week. It was written by Miss Noma Thompson, a lifelong resident of the community who wished to see her home town's historical significance recorded for posterity.

The history reveals that the gathering at Hungerford's Tavern Resolved: "That every legal and constitutional measure ought to be used by all America for procuring repeal of the Act of Parliament for blocking up the Harbor of Boston . . . (That) the most effectual means for the securing of American freedom will be to break off all commerce with Great Britain . . . until said act be repealed."

Rockville was legally constituted a city by the Maryland General Assembly in 1860, but it had been known by that name since 1801 when it was made a town by legislative act and selected as the seat of the county government.

Prior to that time it had been known by a variety of names. Among them were Martin's Store, Mr. Daly's Tavern, Owen's Ordinary, Hungerford's Tavern, Montgomery Court House and Williamsburg.

Earliest mention of the community came after the division of Frederick County into three districts September 6, 1776. The following May 2, the first court met at Hungerford's Tavern, records show.

Present $500,000 Courthouse

Judges of the Sixth Judicial District of Maryland now sit in the modern fireproof courthouse constructed at a cost of more than $500,000 in 1931 adjacent to and joining a former structure erected in 1891.

The early settlers of Rockville were not content merely to urge breaking off trade relations with Great Britain. They took an active part in fighting the battles of the Revolution which led to ultimate independence.

Two battalions of Frederick County, of which Rockville was still a part, were selected to participate in the relief of Boston. From that time on, throughout the history of the Nation's wars, the community and the county have been well represented.

War was brought to the town when Lee's army under Gen. Jeb Stuart passed through Rockville in June 1863 en route to Gettysburg, and the following year a cavalry skirmish took place in the village streets.

Men in 29th Infantry Division

In World Wars I and II many more men answered the colors under the banner of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division of the Maryland National Guard.

Today, a bronze Confederate soldier stands with arms folded in front of the courthouse facing away from the Mason-Dixon line.

Men of Rockville and Montgomery County have played an important part in the government of the State and Nation as well as of the county.

Montgomery Blair, whose name survives with the high school named for him in Silver Spring, served in Lincoln's Cabinet as Postmaster General from 1860 to 1864, and Blair Lee served the State as United States Senator from 1913 to 1917.

Bolt Hits Spot 3d Time, Kills 3d in Family

Rome, Oct. 9 (AP).—For the third time in 50 years lightning struck the same spot at Taranto, in southern Italy. And for the third time a man in the Primardo family was killed.

Dispatches from Taranto said 27-year-old Rollo Primardo was killed in his back yard yesterday.

Twenty years ago his father was killed by lightning in the same spot.

Fifty years ago his grandfather suffered the same fate on the same plot of ground.

patients. Recently, the District Commission on Licensure invalidated such certificates but rescinded the order after a week and restored the borderline certificates until the next meeting, in January, of the Virginia General Assembly.

Not True of Washington

Dr. Love said there is a "strong feeling" in the Virginia medical profession against permitting relatively free practice within the state of physicians from all states bordering Virginia. This is not true of Washington, he said, because of the special and close suburban relationship.

Any resolution passed here at the 102d annual meeting of the Medical Society would be "only a recommendation."

"This is purely a legislative matter, requiring a change in the state law, not in the operation of the Medical Society," he said. "It's a medico-legal matter. But we have the promise of our legislators that a bill to end this inequality of practice privileges will be introduced next January."

Dr. Love is a member of the society's House of Delegates, representing Alexandria. He said the resolution has the support of other delegates from the area. These include Drs. W. C. Welburn and John B. Leary of Arlington and Drs. J. Zylman and H. G. Snead of Fairfax County.

The House of Delegates, lawmaking body of the society, convened here at Hotel Chamberlin tonight. Some 500 physicians of the society's 2200 members are attending the annual meeting, which ends Wednesday.

Presentation of scientific papers, the session at which doctors of the State have a chance to catch up with latest developments in medicine, will begin Monday.

Adventist Book Sales Heads to Meet

A three-day convention for Seventh-Day Adventist regional sales supervisors for religious literature will begin today in Takoma Park.

One hundred and twenty-five delegates from 18 Northern States east of the Mississippi River will attend.

Object of the convention is to plan for a better distribution of health and religious literature demanded by world conditions, according to the denomination's leaders.

George Huse, acting secretary of the Adventist General Conference publishing department will be the presiding chairman. Meetings will be held in the Review and Herald Publishing Association building on Eastern ave.

Reds' Strikes Hinder Moch

forced to resign last week over a wage dispute.

Some progress was reported in Moch's political talks. It was hoped Auriol soon would be able to appoint a new Premier.

Demands for wage increases to meet rising prices were made by Moch's own Socialist Party, causing the government breakdown. Now the Communist-dominated General Federation of Labor has called on miners to strike in support of similar demands.

Moch is faced with the job of placating both workers and politicians.

His political task was handed to him when Auriol had to go to the hospital for an operation to extract a decaying tooth root from his jaw.

Auriol himself might be forced to resign for reasons of health if the operation fails to clear up what was described as a general infection.

If this happens it will throw to a badly divided French Parliament the task of electing a new President before a new Premier can be found or before any kind of government can be formed.

United's DC-6 Mainliner 300s now offer greater year-round dependability

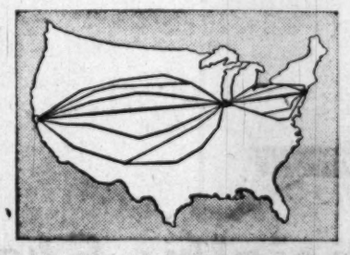
ALTITUDE The pressurized cabin of the DC-6 Mainliner 300 enables United to operate at altitudes of 16,000 feet or higher. You enjoy low-altitude comfort while flying above the weather.

RANGE The DC-6 Mainliner 300 has a nonstop range of over 3000 miles. This enables United to choose any route where the weather is best—and makes it possible to fly around unfavorable weather areas.

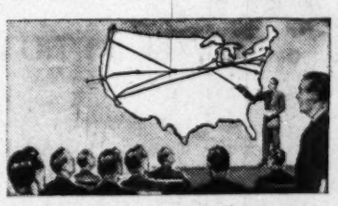
POWER The four engines of the great DC-6 Mainliner 300 develop 8000 hp. and provide reserve power which helps United Air Lines to fly any alternate route in comfort and on schedule.

United's fleet of DC-6 Mainliner 300s has made possible a new concept of year-round flying. With this fleet last winter, United showed a 33% improvement in on-schedule performance! The range, altitude and power of these DC-6 Mainliner 300s are an important factor in this great advance. Equally important are flying techniques developed by United Air Lines. We cannot expect to make a 100% record of on-time performance; no transportation system has ever been able to. But our improvement is steady — and we do expect to have the best record of dependability this winter of our entire history.

United flies the route where weather is best!—With the long range and reserve power of the DC-6 Mainliner 300, United can use systems of multiple airways. From a wide choice of such routes, one or more will almost always be open and your pilot and dispatcher pick the route that's best. Your United pilot navigates accordingly, and keeps you informed during your flight, using the plane's public address system.



United uses the newest electronic aids—Radio range stations provide a network of beams which mark every airway. No matter which route is chosen, your Mainliner is always precision-flown. And new electronic aids—including the Instrument Landing System and Precision Beam Radar—permit Mainliners to land on schedule under conditions of visibility that formerly "closed in" airports. ILS, illustrated above, provides an electronic "highway" descending gently from the sky to the runway.



United's Operations Control Center monitors your flight—At Denver, the progress of all flights over United's 10,700-mile system is monitored. Weather reports, not only from the ground stations all over the country, but from planes in flight as well, provide an accurate, up-to-the-minute picture of flying conditions everywhere.

United's experience—United has flown more than 12 million passengers over 6 billion passenger-miles. From this background come seasoned, highly trained women and men—including veteran pilots who have been flying for years under all conditions. These are the all-important people who make the system work!

WHAT DOES IT ALL MEAN TO YOU? JUST THIS:

Year-round air travel is here. No longer need you forego the speed and economy of flying because weather "looks bad" to you. Now you can FLY UNITED with a new assurance of comfortable, dependable travel the year around.

Up-To-Date Records Refute Tax Delinquents' Alibis

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

The office of the Collector of Internal Revenue in Baltimore handles more than 2¼ million tax returns each year.

Despite this tremendous volume of business, his office can spot, always within a matter of minutes, where you, the taxpayer, stand as far as your tax payments go.

And there lies the collector's answer to the thousand of delinquent taxpayers, who have been alibi-ing when tax liens are filed against them: "But my taxes are all paid up." Or "I didn't realize I owed the money. I was never notified. It must be a mistake."

"Just Isn't So"

Says Collector George Hofferbert: "Barring the human margin of error—it just isn't so."

The many returns are from the District of Columbia, the entire State of Maryland and from Puerto Rico—from all resident and nonresident aliens and those persons who travel about the country, having no fixed address.

They include personal income tax returns, corporation tax returns, withholding tax returns, Federal insurance contribution returns—just to mention a few.

Each individual return is kept up to date, with every payment that is made on it recorded, checked, cross-checked and proven out in a half dozen ways.

So thorough is the job of bookkeeping and filing, that only during the very heavy rush seasons, does the staff get behind in keeping the records up to date.

765 Employes at Work

Each day, 765 employes work on the returns. During the rush season, which occurs in January, February and March of each year when income tax returns are due, the staff is jumped to 850. Most of the additional workers are placed in the mail room, where as many as 100,000 pieces of mail may be received in a single day. The usual number is about 3000 per day.

In the mail room, the documents are assorted into various classes, according to the type of tax return, whether it is sent in with or without a remittance, etc.

The return with a remittance is then sent to the receiving and clearing section of the cashier's division. Here both are checked several times, detached and recorded. The returns are then classified as to full paid (perfect), or deficient (part-paid or imperfect).

Both types of returns are then sent to the comptroller's office, where cross checks are made. Full-paid returns are filed and the records of those taxpayers closed. Imperfect returns are set aside for later billing of the taxpayer by the comptroller's office.

While the returns are classified and forwarded to this office, the remittances are indorsed in the cashier's division, ready for immediate deposit at the bank.

Filed Alphabetically

When returns come into the mail room without remittances or remittances without returns, each is sent to the unclassified division. There they are filed alphabetically and kept on hand up to 10 days. During that time, the remittances are matched up with returns on record, while the returns filed there are checked daily to see if their remittances show up in a later mail.

At the end of the 10 days, unpaid returns are forwarded to the comptroller's office where they also are set aside for later billing of the taxpayer by this office.

The billing on imperfect and unpaid returns is done monthly, usually around the tenth of each month. Up to this time, daily checks are made to be sure that a remittance on the return has not been received in the meantime.

The bill, which is then sent out, is the taxpayers first notice that he is delinquent. It specifies that he has 10 days in which to take care of the matter.

If he has not paid within 10 days, a second notice, informing him that collection may be made by seizure of property, often is sent out. The second notice is not required by law, however, and is considered to be a "courtesy to the taxpayer" by the collector's office.

The collector's office can file a tax lien notice against the taxpayer anytime after the 10 days of the first notice elapse without action. He is not required to and does not notify the taxpayer that such a lien will be filed.

On the other hand the office may merely send a warrant for restraint to the deputy collectors in the field offices without filing a lien at all. These warrants authorize the deputy collectors to make collections even if it means the seizure of property or rights of property. The taxpayer is not notified that such warrants are sent to the deputy collectors.

Actually there are few collections made through seizure of property or property rights under the warrants or liens—less than one half of one percent annually, the collector's office estimates.

In most cases, the deputy collector, after receiving the warrant or learning of the lien, contacts the taxpayer, who is only too willing to settle the matter as soon as possible (1) because of embarrassment, or (2) if he is a businessman, because his credit drops to practically nil.

Careful Check Made

Immediately before liens are filed, a careful check is made back through the comptroller's and cashier's office to make sure no remittance has been received during the interim of preparing the liens.

A check is also made of the reports by deputy collectors to see if they have agreed with any taxpayer to installment paying of the taxes. A lien is not filed if such an agreement has been made.

When certified checks or money orders are received after leins are filed, the liens are discharged immediately. Personal checks must be cleared through the banks and in that case, liens are not discharged before 30 days.

Under ideal conditions, a tax lien could be filed against a delinquent taxpayer within 10 days after his return is due with a remittance. Actually, several months usually elapse before all the checking and double checking is completed on returns and liens are sent out.

The only cases of very quick action along this line occur in cases of jeopardy, where the collector's office feels the taxpayer will move to get rid of his assets thus preventing the government from collecting what it is owed. A quick lien is filed then to stop such action.

On rare occasions, a tax lien may leave the collector's office headed for court on the same day that the taxpayer in question has placed his remittance in the mail, headed for the collector's office. But seldom is there a crossing of this kind in the mail, according to the collector's office.

Given Ample Notice

With very few exceptions, the taxpayer always knows when he is delinquent and just how much he owes. He is given ample notice about his delinquency and reasonable opportunity to pay up, Hofferbert states.

The number of tax lien notices filed by the Baltimore office have increased slightly this year, for several reasons, Hofferbert explained. In the first place, more clerical help has expedited checking returns and making out liens. In addition there are actually more delinquent taxpayers, particularly among the businessmen who must pay withholding taxes. Business has tightened up and owners are in many cases putting the money designated for withholding taxes back into their business, he said. The collector's office is particularly stern about this type of delinquency since the money designated as withholding taxes is never the property of the businessman but actually belongs to his employe until turned over to the Government, Hofferbert said.

The collector's office has a particular problem in collecting money from Federal Government employes, it was learned. No matter how much they are in arrears, the collector's office can never touch their wages in order to collect back taxes and some 13,000 of them in Washington are delinquent at this time.

Home Rule Victory Seen By Kefauver

"The one blind spot in American democracy is its failure to give suffrage to the District of Columbia," Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday.

"People are probably better equipped in Washington to exercise the franchise than anywhere else," he added. Senator Kefauver, a leader in the fight for home rule, spoke at a breakfast meeting of the Democratic Club, 1526 New Hampshire ave. nw.

But the fight for home rule will be won, the Senator declared, along with other Administration objectives.

"Although some of its results may have been disappointing, the Eighty-first Congress is a fighting Congress, and has stopped the reactionary movement started by the Eightieth Congress," the speaker said. "This Congress will continue to fight for home rule."

Arthur Clarendon Smith, club president, presided at the meeting, held in honor of Tennesseeans in Washington.

Navaho Rights

What began in the Interior Department as a rehabilitation measure for the Navaho and Hopi Indians has landed on the President's desk a confused and ambiguous scheme to modify the country's basic policy toward the Indians. As conceived in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the sole purpose of this bill was to authorize development of the Navaho and Hopi reservations in Arizona, New Mexico and Utah by the building of schools, highways and other improvements. It is now admitted that no special authorization for these projects is needed. Only an appropriation is required, and this bill provides no appropriation. It was initiated in the hope of centering congressional attention upon the Navaho and Hopi problems, but the amendments that Congress attached make the whole project obnoxious.

In the House, Representative Fernandez of New Mexico succeeded in getting into the bill an amendment that would place the Navahos and Hopis under State laws and subject them to the jurisdiction of the State courts. At present, law enforcement on the reservations is entirely in the hands of tribal and Federal officials. Many authorities on Indian affairs agree that the reservations should ultimately be integrated with adjacent communities and that Indians, as well as other people, should be subjected to State law enforcement. In New York, Iowa and Kansas this has already been accomplished, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs is moving toward a wider application of other State laws to Indians. But the Navahos are said to be among the least prepared of all the tribes for a transition of this sort. Certainly if the policy is to be adopted, it should be generalized in principle and then applied only to the tribes that are ready for it.

Confusion has been multiplied by the fact that the Navaho Tribal Council voted 37 to 20 in favor of the Fernandez amendment after spokesmen for the Bureau of Indian Affairs had explained it to them and taken a stand against it. There is much doubt, however, as to whether the tribal fathers understood the full implications of the amendment, and their action is to be reconsidered on Tuesday. Whatever the outcome may be, it seems to us that the ambiguity and discriminatory nature of the amendment condemn it. In addition, another change effected by the conferees would unfairly reduce from 40 to 10 percent the States' contributions to the Social Security system on behalf of the Navahos and Hopis. It looks as if the President could best conserve the interests of these tribes by vetoing the bill. At the same time he could ask Congress to vote funds directly for the rehabilitation projects and the Bureau of Indian Affairs to work out a new program for gradual relaxation of the Federal wardship over the Indians where and when it is feasible.

Epilogue

The 1949 baseball season came to an end yesterday at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, but not until the quality of play had reverted to the 1949 standard. For the first three days the boys had been, as the saying goes, playing far over their heads and giving us those ultraclassical performances reminiscent of the days of Mathewson, Bender, Plank and Donovan; but they just couldn't keep it up. In the end the World Series became like a contest between the Jimsonweed Grammar School and the Ragweed A. C. The main problem became that of trying to get the game over in time for the players and the umpires and the paying customers to enjoy the Christmas holidays in the bosoms of their families.

And thus, for yet another time the New York Yankees are champions of the world. If it is true that they are not of a quality with the Yankees of late 1920s or those of the late 1930s, it is also true that the world itself is hardly of a quality with the good old world of Calvin Coolidge and Stanley Baldwin. At any rate, the Yankees proved themselves in every respect a better ball club than the Brooklyn Dodgers, to whom they were, in fact, statistically somewhat inferior, just as they had been in their own league to the Boston Red Sox. The Yankees had what it takes to fight through to success against all sorts of misfortunes and with the odds heavily against them. Such breaks as they got they made for themselves.

There were many distinguished personal performances on both sides. On the side of the Dodgers there was the virtuosity of Mr. Peewee Reese, the shortstop, and of Mr. Roy Campanella, the catcher. If the rest of the club had been up to the standard of those two, the end result might have been different. On the side of the Yankees, however, there were the highly accomplished Messrs. Brown, Henrich and Coleman; and, above all, there were the pitchers, Messrs. Reynolds and Page, by virtue of whom the Yankees far surpassed the Dodgers in a department in which the National League is traditionally presumed to excel. But from yet another point of view the really heroic figure was that of Mr. Joe DiMaggio, who got out of a sick bed to do whatever he could to earn his salary of $90,000 a year. It was hardly his fault that he could do very little; and it would be a very mean and spiteful person that could begrudge his one brief moment of glory when, after so many vain efforts, he finally managed to paste one into the stands, though it made little difference in the result.

And so it is all over for another year; which is, perhaps, just as well for all concerned.

Nationalist China

Nationalist China has completely disintegrated, and the government of Nationalist China which this country still recognizes as the government of China is nonexistent, so that the decision not to return the American Ambassador, Dr. J. Leighton Stuart, was inevitable. The disintegration, however, is not the impression that the people are getting from the propagandists for Chiang Kai-shek. On the contrary, he appears as the leader of what remains in China of resistance to communism. The State Department, which knows better, seems to be inhibited from correcting this impression, and, indeed, is far more reticent about developments in China than is warranted by the looming prospect that momentous decisions must soon be made. The best guide through the fog of propaganda is the newspaper reporter. He, in the person of Mr. Tillman Durdin, cabling from Canton to the New York Times, has, for instance, tried to make clear the relations between the Acting President, General Li Tsung-jen, and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

It appears that, aside from a few independent and semi-independent war lords in southern China, there are two main factions in what remains of Nationalist China. One is the Canton faction under the Acting President, Li Tsung-jen, and the other the Formosa faction under Chiang Kai-shek. It will be recalled that last January 21 Chiang quit as President, and put in Li Tsung-jen to "exercise the duties and powers of President." The change seemed to be harmonious. But pretty soon a rift occurred, and the surmise is that Chiang riled Li by removing to Formosa not only air and land units essential to the defense of Nanking and the Yangtze, but also a 300-million-dollar gold reserve. When Senator Connally mentioned this latter fact, the Chiang defenders in the Senate and elsewhere got very angry, especially over Senator Connally's use of the word "absconding" in explaining Chiang's action. But what other word could the Senator use? Senator Connally was talking about an official who had disappeared with the government till after he had quit office.

Naturally Li, left in the lurch, was put out, but he could not protest in public, since at all costs the semblance of Nationalist unity must be maintained for senatorial consumption. There was therefore what Mr. Durdin called a "limited rapprochement" after the fall of Nanking and Shanghai. Chiang came out of "retirement" as chairman of an Emergency War Council, a post which seemed to give him official power of interference with what is done in Canton—interference, which he could exercise, anyway, in virtue of both his seniority and his control of the purse strings. Li wishes, according to Mr. Durdin, that Chiang would stop his interference in affairs on the mainland. Doubtless he would like to get hold, too, of the arms that Chiang has cached in Formosa. The Li men, in their effort to get their hands on these sinews of war against the advancing Communists, are quoting an expressive old Chinese proverb to the effect that you can recognize your mother by the milk she gives. However, the milk is being withheld, with Chiang devoting himself, according to the Tokyo correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, to enrollment of a strong Japanese force, officers and personnel of which he has already smuggled to Formosa, for the defense of Japan's former possession.

What is Chiang's policy? To this newspaper it has seemed clear for a long time that Chiang is counting on the outbreak of a Russo-American war. He reasons that in this event the Americans will force him back to power in China. To enable him to hold out pending zero hour he has been unavailingly courting support all round the rim of the Pacific. In spite of his resources of manpower, he wants the Japanese to fight for him. In spite of his hoard of gold (and the more than 500 million dollars in bank balances that Nationalists hold in America), he wants American cash to finance him. He has been trying to set up an anti-Communist front with Filipino and Korean support. In spite of his possession of territory, he has tried, according to the Monitor correspondent, to get a springboard on Korean territory from which his Japanese mercenaries could operate. Chiang, in short, seems bent upon promoting rather than waiting for Russo-American trouble and upon getting others, in the meantime, to fight his battles for him. The time is overdue to disembarrass ourselves of Chiang Kai-shek, so that a truly American policy can be developed, and this, we take it, is at last beginning in the decision to keep Ambassador Stuart at home.

Going To The People

Philip Murray's decision to carry his case in the steel strike to a Nation-wide radio audience on Wednesday night is not only a bid for public support but also a recognition of the enormous public interest in a prompt and reasonable settlement of the dispute. Mr. Murray doubtless realizes that the union cannot win without powerful backing on the part of the public. And it will not have such backing unless a great number of people come to believe that the United Steelworkers' position is basically right.

We suspect that Mr. Murray's plea will be effective in proportion to his candor in meeting the actual issues. He will be under great temptation to continue the angry shouting that characterized the beginning of the strike. That would be a disservice to his cause and to the public interest in getting the strike settled. Nor would it serve any purpose to reiterate the union's demands before the President's Fact-Finding Board made its recommendations. For better or worse, the board's report has centered the dispute on pension and insurance plans. In all probability the settlement will have to be found in the adjustment of differences within this sphere.

The weakness of the union's case to date lies in the fact that many steel companies have offered to pay the full 10 cents an hour for pensions and social insurance, as recommended by the Fact-Finding Board, if the employes will contribute additional small amounts. These offers stop short of full acceptance of the fact-finders' proposal, but they go such a long way in that direction as to give the companies a favorable standing before the bar of public opinion. This is especially true because of the basic soundness of the contributory principle and its general acceptance in Social Security legislation. To overcome the favorable impression created by these offers, Mr. Murray will doubtless have to bring forth some constructive suggestion of his own that will take the union out of the position of merely contending for an unsound principle of employe security.

Before the strike began the union was willing to accept 10 cents an hour for welfare benefits, if the employes were not required to contribute. Starting from this basis, there are various different compromises that might prove acceptable. One that has been suggested is that the company pay the full 10 cents an hour upon agreement by the union to share any welfare expenses above that figure, so as to put a brake upon future demands. Any reasonable new offer from the union would have the salutary effect of encouraging a prompt resumption of negotiations in addition to the strategical advantage of winning public support for the United Steelworkers' cause.

It is true, of course, that Mr. Murray is under heavy pressure from John L. Lewis, the AFL and the pro-Communist leaders in the CIO because he yielded his original demand for a fourth-round wage increase. All of these groups hope to see the steelworkers take a last-ditch stand in the belief that it would buttress their own drives for higher wages. But this reasoning utterly ignores the disaster that would result from a long steel strike or from setting the wage-price spiral into motion again. Already one of the steel companies that has signed an agreement with the union has announced a boost in the price of steel plates. A prolonged strike resulting from an intransigent stand would ultimately be paid for by workers and consumers, and it is difficult to see how it could relieve Mr. Murray from the squeeze play in which he has been caught.

Investigating Crime

Washington's abominable crime rate affords plenty of reasons for the investigation of law enforcement proposed by Representative Davis of the House District Committee. Why, for example, does Washington, with a far higher than average level of income and education, lead the country in aggravated assaults? What, beyond the technicalities of law enforcement, are the causes of the high incidence of crime here? Any findings along these lines would be of great benefit.

Surely, however, Mr. Davis cannot expect to do an adequate job with the $2500 in committee funds which he says is available. That is peanuts compared with the requirements of a full-fledged study. The current dispute between Police Superintendent Barrett and United States Attorney Fay over the kind of arrests made and about whether they should be prosecuted is only symptomatic of the deeper considerations in the crime situation. There can be no excuse for a superficial report that would merely whitewash one side or the other on the basis of statistics. By all means let there be an investigation—but let it go into the operations of all law enforcement agencies, and let the investigators have the money they need to dig beneath the surface. Anything less would merely confuse the issues.

THE HARVEST

Out of the narrow slip of earth,
Faded the furrow, reluctant in birth,
Grew somehow in wind and rain
The green blade tipped with yellow grain.
But in my mind a season grows
Colder than winter and the autumn rains.
And from that darkness there will come
Only a sullen roof, a barren leaf
No flower and no golden sheaf
Can bloom where I have planted grief.

Czech Uranium

Perhaps it is a dreary job "whipping up" a column every day. Especially if, like Mr. Drew Pearson, you have a few gossip-mongers from some Federal agencies as main sources of information and the readers are interested in other things, such as the development of atomic energy in the U. S. R. R.

In such a case, there is a very old recipe, which Mr. Pearson followed in his column of October 3: Take a few old, long-disproved stories, blend them carefully, season with a bit of new slander and beat the concoction for 15 minutes with the keys of your typewriter, and then you have a new column, piping hot.

The new seasoning of Mr. Pearson's concoction of October 3 is the story of Jachymov, the Czechoslovak town where uranium is being mined as a hush - hush Russian - operated center where "no visitors are admitted."

To see how untrue this statement is, anybody can go to the nearest tourist agency. There he will learn that Jachymov or Joachimsthal is one of the Czechoslovak health resorts which is soliciting visits from foreigners and where hundreds of Czechoslovak citizens have been and are taking radium treatment. It is about as much a prohibited area as Warm Springs or Miami. John Steinbeck was there last year, with the well-known photographer, Mr. Cappa, whose photographs of the mines were published in the London magazine Illustrated. JAN VINAR.

Polio Hysteria

The article headed "Few Deaths from Polio Recorded in the District of Columbia Area" in your October 1 issue, should have been given front page treatment. Such articles too seldom appear in the press, particularly during the so-called polio period.

As the father of four young children, one of whom has had polio with complete recovery, I have been tempted to send a note to you suggesting that your fine newspaper could do a great deal to allay the fears of parents during the polio "hysterical period." I would suggest that when you give statistics on polio cases next year you do it somewhat along the following lines:

Polio cases 1949	170	cases
Complete Recoveries	162	"
Cases with Paralysis	7	"
Deaths	1	"
Polio cases 1950 to date	65	cases
Complete Recoveries	61	"
Cases with Paralysis	4	"
Deaths	0	"

Such a handling would emphasize the truth, that a large percentage of cases completely recover, that there is very little permanent paralysis and very few deaths occur. Although I do not have possession of the figures, I will wager that more children are seriously injured or die from accidents such as drowning from lack of knowledge of swimming and from violating traffic rules while riding bicycles.

When polio strikes a family the hysteria is so terrible that neighbors, friends and servants run for cover. A serious problem is presented in obtaining food from the grocery, doing the household duties and providing entertainment for the quarantined children—when all could be done by a good Samaritan who knew and understood the truth.

Your newspaper can be of real help in eliminating the hysteria by publishing the facts of previous years along with the current figures.

Dynamic Constitution

George W. Williams (letter published October 5) joins the protest of Jefferson - Jackson Democrats against the Fair Deal creating its "welfare state" out of a mangled Constitution. He quotes the sacred writings of Madison, Woodrow Wilson and F. D. R. to prove the "general welfare" and "commerce" clauses were restraints on national sovereignty and not grants of usurping power.

Our Constitution was written in a three-dimensional age. We enjoyed the isolation and immunities of time and space. That age of isolation, self-sufficiency and independence has ended. The atomic age has imposed the fourth dimension of dynamic and inexorable social change upon our reluctant wills and minds. The historic dynamics of social change has made indivisible oneness of all being, all time and all space.

The historic purpose of social dynamics is to provide dependable collective security for all. I believe our Constitution can meet this challenge. In the past reactionaries used the "due process" clause to give property and vested interest the human rights of liberated slaves. Now they protest the "welfare clause" as an instrument of inevitable social change providing collective security and social justice for all.

The real issue is whether the "welfare" cluase is to be an instrument of national conscience or a weapon of political power. Selfish politicians are using it as a means to power. They are using it to share wealth instead of sharing burdens. Collective security is a matter of sharing common burdens, not redistributing wealth.

If we are to survive in an atomic age the "welfare" clause must be an instrument to share our common burdens and not to redistribute wealth to those who do not produce it.

Postal Employes

Each time a pay bill is presented to the House and Senate, a separate bill for the postal group, and one for the classified group. The objection voiced by some against a postal bill is that all should be treated alike. This is as far as the pay raise goes, but very little is mentioned about treating all alike as far as sick and annual leave is concerned. The classified group gets 26 days annual and 15 days sick leave a year, whereas the postal group gets 15 days annual and 10 days sick leave. How about treating us all alike on the leave.

A classified employe works his eight hours a day, gets off and goes where he wishes and relaxes. The postal clerk works his eight hours, goes home and studies for his next examination. If he is lucky and passes three or four such examinations his first year in the service, he is allowed to stay in and take such examinations until he has reached the age of retirement. Why not treat us all alike and have the classified group pass through a study scope such as this? P. A. SHORB.

Steel Pensions

May I suggest some principles for consideration by all concerned with the current steel strike over company-financed pensions?

The only way a workman can live as a free human being with a minimum of security is through offering his work to an employer. In exchange for his work, the worker must receive the means of livelihood sufficient to meet ordinary domestic needs. Such a livelihood is the first charge on industry. If the industry does not produce things really needed and cannot pay this livelihood, it must be reorganized; it cannot justify its existence without paying its true costs.

A worker's right to a decent livelihood is superior to an employer's, or an owner's, right to superfluous income. Large companies, such as those in steel, can afford to pay pensions to their officials and, in some cases (e.g. Ford and the coal mines) to employes. Why, therefore, are not other employes in associated industries entitled equally to a company-financed pension?

The cost of security for an industry's workers' old age is a proper cost of that industry, rather than one to be charged to Government-operated "social security" systems. The reason for this is that persons (e.g. the steel employers, owners and workers) most directly concerned with a problem (e.g. steelworkers' pensions) know most about it and can and should solve it themselves, rather than create the further problem of unnecessary centralization of Government. Slaughtered Trees

When I read of more and more of our District trees slated for destruction in the name of "traffic safety" I recall a character in one of Sinclair Lewis' novels. A European visitor to our shores, he is asked his opinion of our country and our people, and replies that the leading impression he is carrying away of the U. S. A. is that it is an area in which so much attention has been expended on perfecting more and more efficient methods of getting more and more rapidly from place to place that there is scarcely any place left in it worth getting to.

The same issue which announces that even trees on the estates of the rich on Foxhall rd. have been sentenced to be destroyed carries a modestly brief letter signed by H. B. Bradford (October 5) pointing out that a far greater safety measure than hacking down all the surviving shade trees everywhere, and at a fraction of the cost, would be the simple device of changing traffic regulations to oblige motorists to make left turns around corners on red, instead of on green lights! 'Truman of Macedonia'

On March 13 your paper carried a feature article and picture of "Truman of Macedonia." This was the story of a Greek shepherd in western Macedonia and his part in fighting the Italians and the Greek guerillas.

I am at present in the area where "Truman of Macedonia" is and as a member of the American Mission, I see him quite often. He is still helping the cause of the Greek national army, and is extremely proud of the writeup given him by your newspaper. He has only one copy of it which he carries constantly, and by now it is well creased and tied together only by voluminous pieces of scotch tape.

Matter of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Grain Among Chaff

THROUGH NO FAULT of the Air Force, there is an important grain of truth among the volumes of dusty chaff that are being so angrily blown about the Capitol by the embattled naval aviators. Our defense has not been balanced since the war; it is not balanced today, and if present plans are followed, it will not be balanced for a long time to come.

This is so because our civilian political leaders have chosen to gamble on the deterrent effect of our strategic aviation and our stockpile of atomic weapons. The joint Chiefs of Staff have not recommended this gamble, any more than they have approved Admiral Radford's fantastic project for defending ourselves against a nonnaval power by investing the bulk of our resources in the Navy. The gamble has been chosen as the easiest way out of a dilemma.

The dilemma is, of course, whether to meet the challenge of Soviet rearmament, with all the attendant effort and expense; or to avoid the effort and expense, and not meet the challenge. The gamble on strategic aviation plus an atomic stockpile represents an attempt to escape both of the dilemma's extremely uncomfortable horns. By the standards of modern war, it is only moderately expensive to maintain the necessary groups of B-29s and B-36s and to push forward with the atomic energy program. Yet it can be (and is) argued that the Soviet Union will never risk aggression while the masters of the Kremlin know their country "can be put back into the fourteenth century in a matter of weeks."

THE MAIN REASON why we have drifted into this immense gamble on a simple deterrent, is probably the most obvious reason. In the past four years, only three leaders of the Administration have really believed in rearming in earnest. But Robert A. Lovett is now in New York; Averell Harriman is in Paris, and James V. Forrestal is in Arlington Cemetery. They alone asked, "What needs to be done?" The question asked nowadays is, "What can be done?" which, being interpreted, means, "What is it convenient to do?"

In part, it is understandable why the underlying question of all policy-making is being rather differently phrased nowadays than in the past. Even under Lovett, the State Department staff was always primarily political-minded. They regarded the world-contest with the Soviet Union as chiefly a political contest. They feared that the defense effort would be competitive with the gigantic efforts needed to build strong economic-political foundations under the free world. They came perilously close to deprecating such purely strategic developments in our foreign policy as the Atlantic Pact.

Now, moreover, although in Dean G. Acheson we have a Secretary of State of the greatest attainments, it is not possible for Acheson to take the part that Lovett did in American defense planning. Indeed, it is hard enough for Acheson to protect his own field of policy-making from unwarranted incursions from the defense establishment.

Meanwhile, at the defense establishment, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson has wisely and courageously sought to break the shockingly wasteful habits of the armed services, which have done so much to prevent straight-thinking about defense problems. But Johnson lacks the ripe politico-strategic experience of a Lovett or a Forrestal; and he is aso immensely ambitious. Thus he is inevitably tempted to go beyond true economy and to make the false economies that look fine now but may cost, later on, untold lives and incalculable treasure.

FINALLY, there is the Bureau of the Budget, with its great influence and its natural professional deformation. There is the Chairman of the Economic Advisory Council, Dr. Edwin Nourse, with his peculiar doctrine that America, the wealthiest nation the world has seen, is not rich enough to defend herself. And there is the Secretary of the Treasury, John Snyder, with his great influence on the President, and his firm commitment to the doctrines of business as usual.

In view of this array of influences on the side of not doing what obviously needs to be done, we should perhaps thank God that at least we possess the deterrent of the B-36s and the atomic stockpile. Anyone who knows the state of the defenses of the free world, knows that we have very little else. And at any rate, a deterrent is something.

On the other hand, it is difficult to forget that the world was once before confronted with a giant power, frankly aggressive in intention, and rearming with all possible speed. On that occasion, Stanley Baldwin was the man whom the dilemma bleakly confronted. Baldwin chose to do only what it was convenient to do. Before long, the aggressor had achieved decisive strength. Fear begot weakness, and weakness begot the appeasement of Neville Chamberlain. But appeasement achieved nothing but shame. And the ultimate horror ensued.

'Top' Lobbyist Gets Salary of $65,000

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Mouth-watering tales of lush salaries paid to so-called pressure boys employed by Washington lobbies have filled Washington columns for years.

Like most stories attempting to give the inside picture of one segment of the highly complex society making up the Capital of this great, sprawling and diversified Nation, these are part truth, part fiction and inevitably colored by the personal point of view of the writer.

For exampe, the so-called "liberal" columnist will concentrate his fire on what he is prone to call the machinations of the power lobby, and show — correctly — by statistics and figures that it is a very monied outfit indeed.

Some Truth in Each

The self-styled "conservative" columnist, on the other hand, will speak darkly of the pressure of labor groups, the legislative conniving of labor unions, and the money being poured into such lobbies as the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons.

And, as always, some grain—or many grains—of truth will be found in each.

Critics of the power lobby, who rightly or wrongly attribute to it every attack on an exponent of public power, such as Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission, so far have a leg up on all other groups in having as a target the highest paid lobbyist of record.

Walter Lippmann has left on an extended tour of the news capitals of Europe, the Near East and India. His column, "Today and Tomorrow," will be temporarily suspended while he is en route, but he will write occasional articles from abroad beginning shortly

He is Purcell L. Smith, who annually receives a salary of $65,000 from the National Association of Electric Companies.

But the question is, was Smith paid entirely for lobbying unwitting Congressmen into "going down the line" for private enterprise and private power?

Smith says of his salary, "On the basis of the activities of the aassociation to date, I estimate that not over 25 percent of my time is spent on legislative matters within the purview of the (Registration) act."

No Argument Necessary

And strange as it may seem to some liberals, there are many, probably today a majority, of members of Congress who don't have to be "lobbied" into supporting private power. That's just the way they themselves think.

And a convinced Congressman is a determined, and frequently very vocal, critter.

N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., the advertising and public relations firm, is registered also as a lobbyist for the National Association of Electric Companies, at a take last recorded as $44,255.92, in salaries and out-of-pocket expenses.

Ayer does not construe its services as lobbying, but apparently has registered just in case somebody should sometime catch a member of its organization talking to a Congressman.

In its statement to the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House, Ayer says:

"Registrant furnishes the National Association of Electric Companies consulting service on public relations and publicity services regarding the electrical industry.

"While generally such publicity work has direct relations to legislation pending before the Congress of the United States of America, some of it is intended to aid and influence the passage or defeat of such legislation affecting the electric industry, and some of it may be held to have such effect though not so intended. Registrant does not believe that its activities come within the purview of the Lobbying Act and files this registration solely to avoid the penalty of the act and with full reservation of all rights."

It should be noted here that although Purcell Smith is the highest paid lobbyist of record, congressional and Government experts are agreed he probably is not the highest paid lobbyist in Washington, only the highest paid registered lobbyist.

There are tales in informed quarters, for example, of one lobbyist registered at a very high salary to represent one important business interest, and who in fact draws a much higher unregistered salary for representing quite another.

It is not improbable that this lobbyist may face some uncomfortable moments in a congressional witness chair when the House investigation gets under way in November.

Next in line in the top-salary bracket is J. Carter Fort, who is registered at a salary of $50,000 for the Association of American Railroads. Here again, it is uncertain how much time Fort puts into lobbying and how much into his other duties.

And once more, it should be noted that there are many railroad interests who are not registered and who may surely be said to influence legislation.

Ex-Congressman On List

Is a vice president of a large railroad to be expected to register because he dines frequently with a boyhood friend, who happens to be a Senator connected with railroad legislation?

Next in line in the top-salary bracket is Ernest W. Greene, who represents the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association at a salary of $45,180 a year.

The beet sugar interests pay a little less. Robert H. Shields is registered at a salary of $40,000 for the U. S. Beet Sugar Association.

Former Representative Clifton A. Woodrum of Virginia draws a $36,000 salary from the American Plant Food Council. He is only one of a number of former legislators now interesting themselves in some specialized business that occasionally takes them back to the marble halls on Capitol Hill. As in the case of other registrants only part of Woodrum's salary can be attributed to actual lobbying activity.

Not All Lobbyists Included

At this point it is well to note that this series does not purport to cover the activities of lobbyists before the executive departments, a very important field in itself. As may be expected, this is a field in which former Washington officials—from Capitol Hill and other governmental circles — are quite active. Here again, it is extremely difficult to determine what is lobbying and who is a lobbyist.

Should an important public figure, whether a labor union official or the head of a large business enterprise, register as a lobbyist if President Truman calls him to the White House to give his views on pending legislation?

Should a lady whose husband has important business pending before a Government commission be required to register if she cultivates the friendship of a member of the commission?

To continue with the upper-bracket group:

Eugene M. Thore receives a $35,000-a-year salary from the Life Insurance Association of America.

Bruce E. Shepherd receives the same salary from the same organization, a fact undoubtedly prompting harmonious working relations at any rate.

Paul Porter Is Listed

The American-Hawaiian Steamship Company pays $22,000 a year to Donald S. Morrison.

Some conservatives, who really don't want to make too much of the handsome salaries big business can and does pay, have found some comfort in the fact that Paul A. Porter, of the law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter, who is classed as a New Dealer of the purest stripe unsullied, is registered as a lobbyist for the Western Union Telegraph Company at a salary of $25,000.

But that registration clearly says the registrant is employed "in an attorney-client relationship on a retainer basis."

Even experts throw up their hands when they try to determine how much of that fee is for lobbying and how much for legal work. (Additional names of highly-paid registered lobbyists will appear Tuesday.)

Twin Moves Begun to Get DP Bill Out of Committee

Senate Majority Whip Francis J. Myers (Pa.) said nothing in the McCarran message would interfere with the announced plan to call up the DP discharge petition signed by a bi-partisan group of 16 Senators.

Senator Ferguson also said he was going ahead with his effort "to get the committee to discharge itself" in advance of the Senate floor move. He said he was doing it as "a courtesy to the committee" so its prerogatives would not be challenged on the floor.

He said he wanted to "look into" McCarran's cabled statement, however, before a final vote on the bill.

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), acting chairman of the committee during McCarran's absence, indicated he would support the Ferguson motion, attempted unsuccessfully once before.

Also tied up in the committee, for more than a year, are the President's recess nominations of the three members of the Displaced Persons Commission, Ugo Carusi, chairman; Harry N. Rosenfield and Edward M. O'Connor. The committee is expected to report these favorably to the Senate during McCarran's absence.

The present DP law provides for admission of 205,000 displaced persons in the two years (1949-50) the DP service here, and of officials of the consular service and the immigration and naturalization service of the United States."

but carries restrictions President Truman has charged are discriminatory against certain groups, chiefly Jews and Catholics. Opposing repeal of the restrictions, McCarran denies they are discriminatory.

The House passed bill of Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) would admit 339,000 displaced persons in three years and modify the restrictions. The McGrath-Neely bill, also before the committee, increases the number of admissions to 400,000.

McCarran's own bill would admit 502,000 in four years but would continue in effect all the restrictions in the 1948 law.

Opponents of the Senate floor move to discharge the committee claim 46 Senate votes against it, but conceded many may be absent from the Senate when the test comes.

Administration leaders challenged the opposition claims, but agreed the vote will be "nip and tuck."

With Senators flocking out of town in advance of adjournment, the decision may turn on which side can produce its votes.

Informed persons on both sides of the controversy said the Senate has a commanding majority for DP legislation but the discharge motion won't bring a clear-cut test. The Senate is traditionally touchy about overriding its standing committees.

tion or attack by any fighter planes in existence.

Captain Trapnell, who has devoted 22 years to naval aviation, predicted that a long-sought test in a "duel" between its Banshee jet fighters and the B-36 would prove the big bomber vulnerability and "result in cancellation of any further B-36 production."

Wants to Call King, Nimitz

In addition to the technician's pin-pointing the Navy's case against Air Force claims for the B-36, Chairman Vinson wants to get views of such top-ranking World War II Naval leaders as Fleet Adms. Ernest J. King and Chester W. Nimitz, former Chiefs of Naval Operations, and William F. (Bull) Halsey, of Pacific war fame.

Vinson intends also to ask Defense Secretary Johnson about the "secret orders" which, he said at Saturday's hearing, threaten to cut Navy and Marine aviation in half by assigning to that service the major (353 million dollars) share of an 800-million-dollar cut in the current year's military budget.

Representative Brooks (D., La.) commented that Johnson had offered to explain the proposed cuts to the committee behind closed doors, and Secretary of the Navy Matthews, who feels that the Navy's projected cut would impair the Nation's security, said the Defense Chief had promised him a hearing in opposition to the proposal.

Secret Hearing Urged By Citizens' Group

By The Associated Press

The Army and Navy Union suggested to President Truman yesterday that he let a citizens' commission resolve the Navy-Air Force dispute in secret rather than let it become a "Roman Holiday" in a congressional hearing.

Joseph C. Stehlin, national commander of the union, made public a letter sent to the President on behalf of the organization.

The letter was authorized, Stehlin said, by a special meeting of some 60 national officers, State commanders and State councilmen of the organization. The union claims a membership of 800,000, including both former members and present members of the armed services.

In the letter, Stehlin said the Navy "is fighting for its corporate life and as a result a state of mutiny exists."

"The recent disclosure of letters by the top uniformed Navy personnel indicates clearly," it added, "that they were written for publication and that the wishes of Congress in the Unification Act are being set aside for a bold and well-planned offensive."

Indifference To Civilian Defense Cited

By the United Press

Representative John F. Kennedy (D., Mass.) warned yesterday that the United States is laying itself open for "an atomic Pearl Harbor" by indifference to civilian defense planning.

In a letter to President Truman, Kennedy said he was "shocked" to find that only one Government official is working full time on such plans despite his announcement that Russia has achieved an atomic explosion.

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, said meantime that he is convinced Americans will never take the drastic precautions necessary to attain relative security from atomic bombardment.

Supreme Effort

The Nation, therefore, must "make the supreme effort of history" to prevent an atomic war by seeking Russian agreement on effective international controls of the awesome force, he said.

Kennedy said it will take "months even years" to prepared adequate plans for atomic defense of United States cities.

In a separate statement, Kennedy said he favors the creation of a permanent civilian defense agency. At present, the over-all program is the responsibility of the National Security Resources Board.

The board has turned over to the General Services Administration the task of planning disaster relief. Kennedy said GSA has turned the job over to one man who has been working at it for only one week. Kennedy listed the functions to be performed by this one man. He said they included:

Plans for medical supplies and service, decontamination and measures to minimize the effects of chemical, atomic and other "unconventional" forms of attack, fire protection and fire-fighting, emergency measures for regulation of transportation and communication facilities, rescue and evacuation of areas, repair and restoration of water, electric and other utility systems and the formation and use of warden or auxiliary services.

U. S. Must Burrow

McMahon said in a Gannett News Service radio interview that the Nation would have to "burrow underground" to get away from the dangers of atomic blasts.

"Building deep concrete, steel-reinforced shelters," dispersing cities and vital industries, and "putting a good many of our installations under ground" are the measures which experts have recommended, he said.

"I think that the statement of the remedy is pretty conclusive proof that the people of the United States just aren't going to do it," he said.

Truman Back Home After Virginia Trip

President Truman returned to Blair House last night after a quiet weekend in Virginia.

He and a small party of associates motored back to Washington after two days of taking it easy at Colle, the Blue Ridge estate of Stanley Woodward, State Department chief of protocol, and Mrs. Woodward.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BROOKLYN, Oct. 9.—Outside Ebbets Field, at the maze of intersections, the dismal Dodger fans were having a hard time of it, even as it had been hard watching their beloved Bums take that final licking from the Yankees today. Streaming for the subways, they were fighting a losing battle with the cab jockeys.

One sidewalk full of Brooklyn fans started across the street on the signal of the nearest cop. The whole mob was almost run down by taxis getting a "go" sign from another copper in the middle of the intersection.

POVICH

None too nimbly, one stout and shirt-sleeved Brooklynite barely escaped being splattered across a cab's front grill.

"Holy cripes," he screamed, "Snotton must be directing traffic around here."

And it wasn't too far-fetched an assumption. That Manager Burt Shotton had snarled up the Dodgers in their Series with the Yanks was a general belief in Brooklyn.

Certainly all the evidence was that Casey Stengel had out-smarted Shotton at every turn of the maneuvering, particularly in manipulating his starting pitchers. And today, when the Dodgers were left with Rex Barney as their main reliance in the vital fifth game, all of Shotton's calculations backfired on him.

This was the game that Don Newcombe, or Ralph Branca should have been pitching for the Dodgers, not Barney who had won only nine games all year against eight defeats, finished only six. Shotton had gambled unwisely with pitchers from the outset.

TODAY, WITH BARNEY plainly ineffective, Shotton went far down the line with him—too far. All of the seven batters he faced in the first inning took him to a 3-and-2 or 2-and-1 count. He walked three of them and made a wild throw, yet there was no activity in the Dodgers bullpen. And they let him put four men on base in a row in the Yanks' 3-run third before Shotton got him out of there.

There was a gasp, too, in the third inning when the Dodgers finally got a man on base against Raschi, and Relief Pitcher Jack Banta was permitted to take his turn at bat. At the time, the Dodgers were trailing, 5-0, with one out, and with all due respect to Banta's potential as a relief pitcher, here was a spot where the Dodgers needed some hits, not pitching.

Stengel, in contrast, never trifled. When he had to protect a lead yesterday, he wheeled out a starting pitcher, Allen Reynolds, for a relief job. And today, with the Yankees holding a tremendous 10-2 lead, Stengel was taking nothing for granted. When the first two Dodgers in the sixth reached base against Vic Raschi, Stengel ordered Joe Page to warm up. He was battening all the hatches against the escape of the win that would knock the Dodgers out of it.

Rogers Hornsby was talking about that, even before the start of today's game. "The time to gamble with your pitchers in a World Series is at the start, when you have time to recover, not at the finish where it can kill you," observed Hornsby.

"Stengel played it smarter," said Hornsby. "Reynolds didn't figure as his best pitcher, but he started him in the first game and won, and Shotton wasted his ace, Newcombe. Had to start him later with two days rest."

SHOTTON DID get a break when Preacher Roe came up with the damaged finger that made him unavailable for a second start. But it was no less than an impulsive act to pitch Newcombe yesterday. The big right hander was a tired pitcher who had spent himself in his 1-0 defeat in the opener, only two days before. The place for Barney, if at all, was in yesterday's game, with Newcombe his last-ditch pitcher.

The outspoken Hornsby, a spade-caller from way back, pulled no punches in indicting Shotton. "In the fourth game, with two on and first base open, he orders Joe DiMaggio purposely passed. There are two out, and in this series it was a pleasure to pitch to DiMag, who is sick and hasn't been able to whip that bat like the old DiMag.

"So they pass DiMag and pitch to Bobby Brown, and the Yankees get three runs out of it on Brown's triple. Before that happened, the Dodgers had DiMag really in the dumps. It wasn't smart to give him that kind of psychological lift, anyway. And so what happens? Today, he's fresh and eager and murders the ball."

Marshall Calls Official Incompetent After Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Back Judge Claude T. Grigsby, who called two costly interference plays against the Redskins yesterday, was decribed as "incompetent to work in first rate football" by George P. Marshall, president of the 'Skins.

Seething over Grigsby's ruling and also his team's 45-35 loss to the underdog New York Giants, Marshall said he had requested that Grigsby not be permitted to officiate at any future Redskins' games.

Takes Quick Action

Marshall made the request to League Commissioner Bert Bell minutes after the Redskins had taken their licking from the Giants at Griffith Stadium.

Holding court in the Redskins' dressing room, Marshall said he wanted it understood he wasn't blaming the Redskin defeat on the officiating, but that he was merely stating his opinion on Grigsby's fitness.

Marshall said he told Grigsby what he told reporters and that he had also protested vigorously to Commissioner Bell.

Bell, he said, told him to put his protest in writing.

Bell, Marshall Differ

When the commissioner was told that Marshall described Grigsby as "incompetent," Bell replied, just as vigorously:

"I differ with Mr. Marshall. Mr. Grigsby has officiated in the National Football League for three years and in my opinion is highly competent in all respects. As far as Mr. Marshall's request that Mr. Grigsby not be permitted to officiate in future Redskin games, all I can say is any league president or owner can make all the requests of that nature that he wishes, but officials will continue to be assigned where I assign them and not where any president or owner wants them."

Both of Grigsby's rulings came in the first half, when the 'Skins were very much in the game. Both were called against Howie Livingston and both led to Giants' touchdowns.

Livingston, 'Skins defensive back, and Bill Swiacki, Giants end, went up for a high pass together in the first quarter and Grigsby ruled Livingston had interfered with Swiacki. The Giants were awarded the ball on the 'Skins 10. Four plays later, they scored to go into a 14-7 lead.

In the second period, Livingston and Swiacki again went up for a Chuck Connerly pass with Livingston intercepting and returning 12 yards only to have Grigsby call interference and award the Giants the ball on the 'Skins 31-yard line. A few plays later, Connerly passed for the touchdown that tied the game again, 21-21.

In the third quarter, the Redskins were again set back by the officials. This time, Umpire Jim Beiersdorfer detected Tackle Len Szafaryn holding and nullified a 64-yard Gilmer to Taylor touchdown pass.

While Marshall was indignant over Grigsby, the 'Skins coach, Admiral Billick Whelchel preferred not to comment.

Grigsby played center and captained the 1928 Georgetown football team. His home is now in Chicago.

A HANDKERCHIEF ON THE PLAY—Back Judge Claude Grisby (arrow) points an accusing finger at Howie Livingston (24), Redskin halfback on this important play in the second quarter of yesterday's clash with the New York Giants. Grisby charged Livington with pass interference when he stole the ball from Bill Swiacki (on knee) and ran the ball back 12 yards, although another official (left background) was on top of the play and failed to call a penalty. The Giants tied the score, 21-21, shortly afterward and went ahead, 45-35

Waterfield Leads Rams Over Bears

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Oct. 9 (AP).—Bob Waterfield's three touchdown passes and a rough Los Angeles line swept the Rams to a 31-16 triumph over the Chicago Bears and sole leadership of the National Football League's Western division today.

A Wrigley Field crowd of 42,124 watched the Rams come back from a 16-3 second period deficit for their third straight victory against no losses. The game was played in shirtsleeve weather.

It was the first loss in three starts for the Bears, who were stumped by Waterfield's deadly passing and a bruising Ram line which slowed them to a walk in the final half.

Besides pitching touchdown tosses to Tom Fears, Elroy Hirsch and Bob Shaw, Waterfield also booted a 23-yard field goal to give the Rams a 3-0 lead and connected on all four of his extra-point tries.

The Rams scored their clinching touchdown in the last period on an 11-yard run by Hirsch after a lateral by Dick Hoerner.

The Bears started snappily in the opening period on Johnny Lujack's screen pass to Julie Rykovich which was good for 46 yards and a touchdown.

Fans See 'Skins, But Their Hearts 'Air' With Yankees

IN PERFECT weather—for baseball—the Redskins opened their home football season here yesterday. Many of the fans were still baseball minded, however. They had their ears tuned to portable radios listening to the World Series broadcast while their eyes were fixed on the gridiron watching the Redskins and Giants.

There was some suspicion in the stands as to whether Gilmer was color-blind or not. The next time he passed he completed it again—to another blue-shirted Giant, Ray Coates, instead of red-shirted Bob Goode. Coates returned it 12 yards to the 'Skins 16, but the officials braced and threw the Giants back 30 yards on two penalties and that threat ended.

Harry Gilmer set up a touchdown the first time he got his hands on the ball. He overlooked the formality of throwing the ball to a Redskin receiver, however, pitching it to Emlen Tunnell, of the Giants, instead, on the 'Skins 13-yard line. Forty seconds later, Gene Roberts plowed over for the touchdown.

COACH BILLICK Whelchel broke up the Giants' passing attack by withdrawing Gilmer and replacing him with Sammy Baugh. Relief pitcher Baugh was a welcome change. He soon relieved the Giants of their 7-0 lead by completing a 28-yard 6-pointer to Bones Taylor and the 'Skins tied the score as Dick Poillon's extra-point kick landed in the concessions stand on the second deck.

What a Baugh this Sammy is.

Shortly after the Giants had forged into a 14-7 lead, the rancher from Rotan, Tex., roped in another touchdown by lassoing Taylor with another perfect pitch to tie the score again.

In the second quarter, Baugh, back to pass, discovered his receivers had previous commitments and weren't available at the moment. So he simply tucked the ball under his arm and ran 16 yards. What made Sammy run as far as he did was a crushing block on Dick Duden by Joe Tereshenski.

When Chuck Cornerly couldn't complete a pass for the giants, backfield Judge Claude Grigsby did. The old Georgetown center called pass interference on the 'Skins twice and the Giants moved for touchdowns both times through the courtesy of Grigsby and the Redskins line.

IT WAS 21-21 eight seconds before the end of the first half and the fans had no kick coming. But the Giants did, sending Joe Agaganian in to boot a 40-yard field goal to give the New Yorkers a 24-21 advantage to carry to their dressing room.

A drill team from the Pensacola Naval Air Station entertained customers at half time. In deference to their old shipmate, Admiral Whelchel, who's now in the football business, the sailors ran several tricky maneuvers from the T-formation. It was difficult to understand why Whelchel didn't use the stuff with the Redskins because the Giants scored three times in six minutes and led, 45 to 21, entering the fourth period.

Gilmer found Howie Livingston all alone in the end zone in the fourth period and threw him a 54-yard pass. Livingston, a defensive Redskin halfback, batted it down.

With 16 seconds left, the Redskins sent in Dick Stovall, a defensive guard. They obviously were trying to hold the Giants to a 45-35 victory. They did.

30,073 See Three Quick Scores Stop Baugh & Co.

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Cut down in their infancy, the 1949 Washington Redskins were solemnly laid to rest yesterday.

Last rites were attended by 30,073 paying mourners who saw the New York Giants, 10-point underdogs, "kill" the Redskins in their first home appearance of the season, 45-35.

Nothing short of a miracle can now get Washington's National Football League representatives into the scrap for the Philadelphia Eagles' Eastern division title. Yesterday's was the Skins' second loss in three games. The Eagles have a string of three straight victories at this point.

Three Quick Scores

A three-minute lapse beat the Redskins. That and a 185-pound gent, late of Mississippi, whom the Redskins once owned but decided to peddle for a defensive halfback and a draft choice.

The lapse came in the third quarter only seconds after a 64-yard Redskin touchdown pass, overcoming the Giants' 24-21 lead at the time, was called back and the hosts penalized for holding. Within exactly two minutes and 42 seconds Coach Steve Owens' invaders had ganged up for three touchdowns. That was the ball game.

To Charley Conerly, and woeful Redskin pass defense, went credit for two of the three sudden touchdowns as well as for a second period touchdown pass that brought the Giants up even.

The passing man Washington traded when it fell in love with Harry Gilmer, of Alabama, completed 11 of his 15 tosses for 206 yards.

Roberts Shares Honor

Gene (Choo-Choo) Roberts, veteran Giant halfback, was almost as much trouble for the Redskins as Conerly. After scoring his team's first touchdown on the second play of the game, the Chattanooga chugger was painfully hurt but came back to take a Conerly scoring pass in the Giant's big uprising and close out the winners' scoring on a 64-yard dash.

Between Roberts' first and last excursions in the Redskin end zone all sorts of strange things took place . . . not the least of which was a near record for the penalties charged against New York. A total of 17 penalties were called against the Giants, costing them 177 yards. It was just 8 yards short of a new mark.

A rough outline of action would show the teams swapping touchdowns in the first period, with Washington taking a 21-14 lead as the second stanza opened. A Conerly pass tied it up again and the Giants went into the intermission leading, 24-21, on a field goal at the instant the halftime gun went off.

Then came New York's sudden wild streak in the third period, boosting its lead to 45-21. There wasn't much doubt of the outcome then despite the two scoring jaunts engineered by Gilmer in the final 15 minutes.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh, making his home debut in his thirteenth year as a pro, was brilliant throughout the first half. He got off touchdown aerials to Hugh Tay-

The Real Winner

Joltin' Joe's Homer Hit Of Series

By Oscar Fraley

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—He was pale and tired but his eyes brightened and his gray-flecked head raised higher and higher as the celebrating New York Yankees came to him man by man and shook his hand.

Joe DiMaggio was the real winner in the 1949 world series.

They all were pulling for the Clipper to belt one, for this was the man whose inspiration carried them to the American League pennant—the spirit of the Yankees who came out of sick bed to show them what you can do when you want to do it.

And his fourth-inning home run blast into the seats was the perfect climax to their victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers for the championship of the baseball world.

"Joe, you're a real champion," said Tommy Henrich, one of the Yankees' old pros as he shook the Jolter's hand and patted him on the shoulder.

"There's a guy with real guts," Henrich added in a quavering voice which barely penetrated the club house bedlam.

THEN, THROUGH the riotous confusion, DiMaggio's teammates stepped up, one by one, and shook his hand. Most of them said a few words. Several of them did it quietly with the look on their faces that they themselves I usually receive from the kids in the bleachers.

Even Commissioner A. B. Chandler, the biggest man in the game, followed the path to Joe's little corner.

"Take good care of yourself because we don't want anything to happen to you," Chandler told the smiling Joe, a listless 18 pounds lighter than normal. "I hope you didn't overtax yourself. But believe me, you were great."

DiMag laughed that he was off for a "long winter's rest in San Francisco."

Then, slipping his arm around the shoulders of his 8-year-old son, Joe, the Clipper said:

"I'll tell you, no homer I ever hit gave me greater satisfaction."

HE HAD BEEN starving out there during the four previous games, getting one scratch hit in 14 times at bat. And, in the third, Duke Snider made a sensational one-handed shoestring catch of one of his drives. But in the fourth, DiMaggio connected—finally.

"Joe was the inspiration," Manager Casey Stengel said. "Maybe he wasn't hitting, but he was the guy who kept us high. How could you let down a guy who wouldn't let you down?"

The noise of the celebration beat through the small, steaming room unabated for a half hour after the game ended. Through it all, DiMaggio sat quietly in his corner, a happy smile on his face and—as result of that homer—a pleasurable anticipation of the future in his beaming brown eyes.

Little Joe Lost A Baseball, Too

Brooklyn, Oct. 9 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, jr., 8, greeted his pop in the dressing room after the game with this apology:

"Gee, Dad, guess what, I lost one of your baseballs."

"Aw, that's ok son," said Joe, sr., "I lost one myself."

He drove a ball out of the park for a home run in the fourth inning.

Joe Page Reveals He Injured Hand Last Friday

Brooklyn, Oct. 9 (AP).—Those interesting invalids, the New York Yankees, were feeling no pain after they outlasted the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10-6, today to win their twelfth world championship.

And it wasn't until the last out had been made that Joe Page, Yankee relief pitcher extraordinary, revealed he too had joined the list of injured.

Page, who came in to stop the Dodgers cold in the last 2 1/3 innings today after Gil Hodges' homer off Vic Raschi had created a new Brooklyn threat, said he had hurt his left hand Friday and as a result was unable to throw curves today.

"It was hurt right here," said Page, indicating the tendon between his left thumb and index finger. "I did it when I hit that grounder in the eighth inning. As a result I couldn't get off my curves. I only threw one today."

Manage Nats? Jimmy Dykes Says, No Thanks

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Before today's World's Series game between the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers, Jimmy Dykes, Philadelphia Athletics' coach, squashed rumors that he was in line for the management of the Washington Nats.

"You can say for me that I don't want the job. I'm perfectly satisfied to be with the Athletics" Jimmy said.

Army Gets 11-Gun Salute on Return To West Point

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 9 (AP).—a thunderous ovation that included an eleven-gun salute greeted Army's victorious football squad back to the plain today following its sparkling 21-7, upset victory over Michigan.

Observers believed the rousing welcome was unequaled in the 60-year history of the game at the Military Academy.

When the noise-making was dispensed with, Coach Earl Blaik said that "this Army team played a much smarter brand of football than the 1946 Blanchard-Davis combination did at Ann Arbor."

Army won that one too.

Casey and Yanks Have What It Takes—Shotton

New York, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Sad-eyed Brooklyn Manager Burt Shotton, who twice led Dodger teams in futile assault on the New York Yankees in World Series in the last three years, had the best reason of all for what happened:

"The Yankees have a little more of what it takes in a World Series. It's a great ball club with a great manager. Not even the Lord could have got more out of the Yankees than Casey Stengel."

Shotton gave the time-honored Brooklyn tocsin.

"We'll be better when we meet the Yankees next fall," he said.

So it's wait till next year for the Bums once again.

But will there be a next year at Brooklyn for Shotton, who twice came out of retirement to take over the helm for his old friend, Branch Rickey?

"I'm not signing myself for next year, you can bet on that," said Burt curtly. "You'll get that information when the front office gives it to you."

World Series Notes:

Dodgers Lose Fifth Series

BROOKLYN, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers, still to win a World Series, must be tired of facing the New York Yankees. The Brooks now have lost five World Series engagements, the last three to the Yankees. The Bronx Bombers whipped them in 1941 and 1947.

It looked like 1947 all over again, with Joe Page finishing off the Brooks with another one of his splendid relief jobs. Two years ago Page stifled the Dodgers with only one hit in a brilliant five-and-a-third-inning relief job. He didn't have to work so hard today. The ace fireman came to Vic Raschi's rescue in the seventh and held the Brooks scoreless in two and one-third innings. He allowed two hits and fanned four, including the side in the ninth.

In addition to Page, the outstanding 1949 series heroes were Pitcher Allie Reynolds and Infielder Bobby Brown and Gerald Coleman. Brown, who wasn't even in the starting lineup in the first two games, led his team with six hits, including a double and two triples. He batted in five runs. Coleman collected five hits, of which three were doubles. Reynolds won a 1-0 game and saved another with a fine relief chore. He fanned 14 in 12 1/3 scoreless innings.

Brown's two triples tied a record set by Eddie Collins of the 1913 Philadelphia Athletics. Each belted two three-baggers in a five-game set.

Duke Snider struck out eight times to tie a record. At least the Duke is in good company. The last man to whiff eight times in a five-game set was Rogers Hornsby of the Chicago Cubs in 1929.

The beaten Dodgers filed into their dressing room like the mourners driving away from a cemetery after the corpse had been lowered away.

"You guys are all alike," Jackie Robinson was saying half seriously, half joking. "You're all cocky, you think there's nothing like the American League."

The object of the remarks was Larry Doby, Cleveland Indians outfielder who had come into say hello. Nearby sat Don Newcombe, who pitched and lost two games, and Catcher Roy Campanella. They stayed out of the discussion.

"How come you let them beat you? Doby had asked.

"Well, where did you guys end up," Robinson came back. "In third place, Bub?"

Stengel Howls Greeting Three Months Early

New York, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—A semi-delirious Casey Stengel, manager of baseball's new world champions was maneuvered from one corner of the dressing-room to the other by enthusiastic photographers who sought him in every possible pose, after today's clincher, Stengel willingly obliged but showed the strain.

The . . photographers . . finally lined Casey on a bench with several of his players.

"All right now," the picture-takers instructed, "let's have a victory yell, Casey."

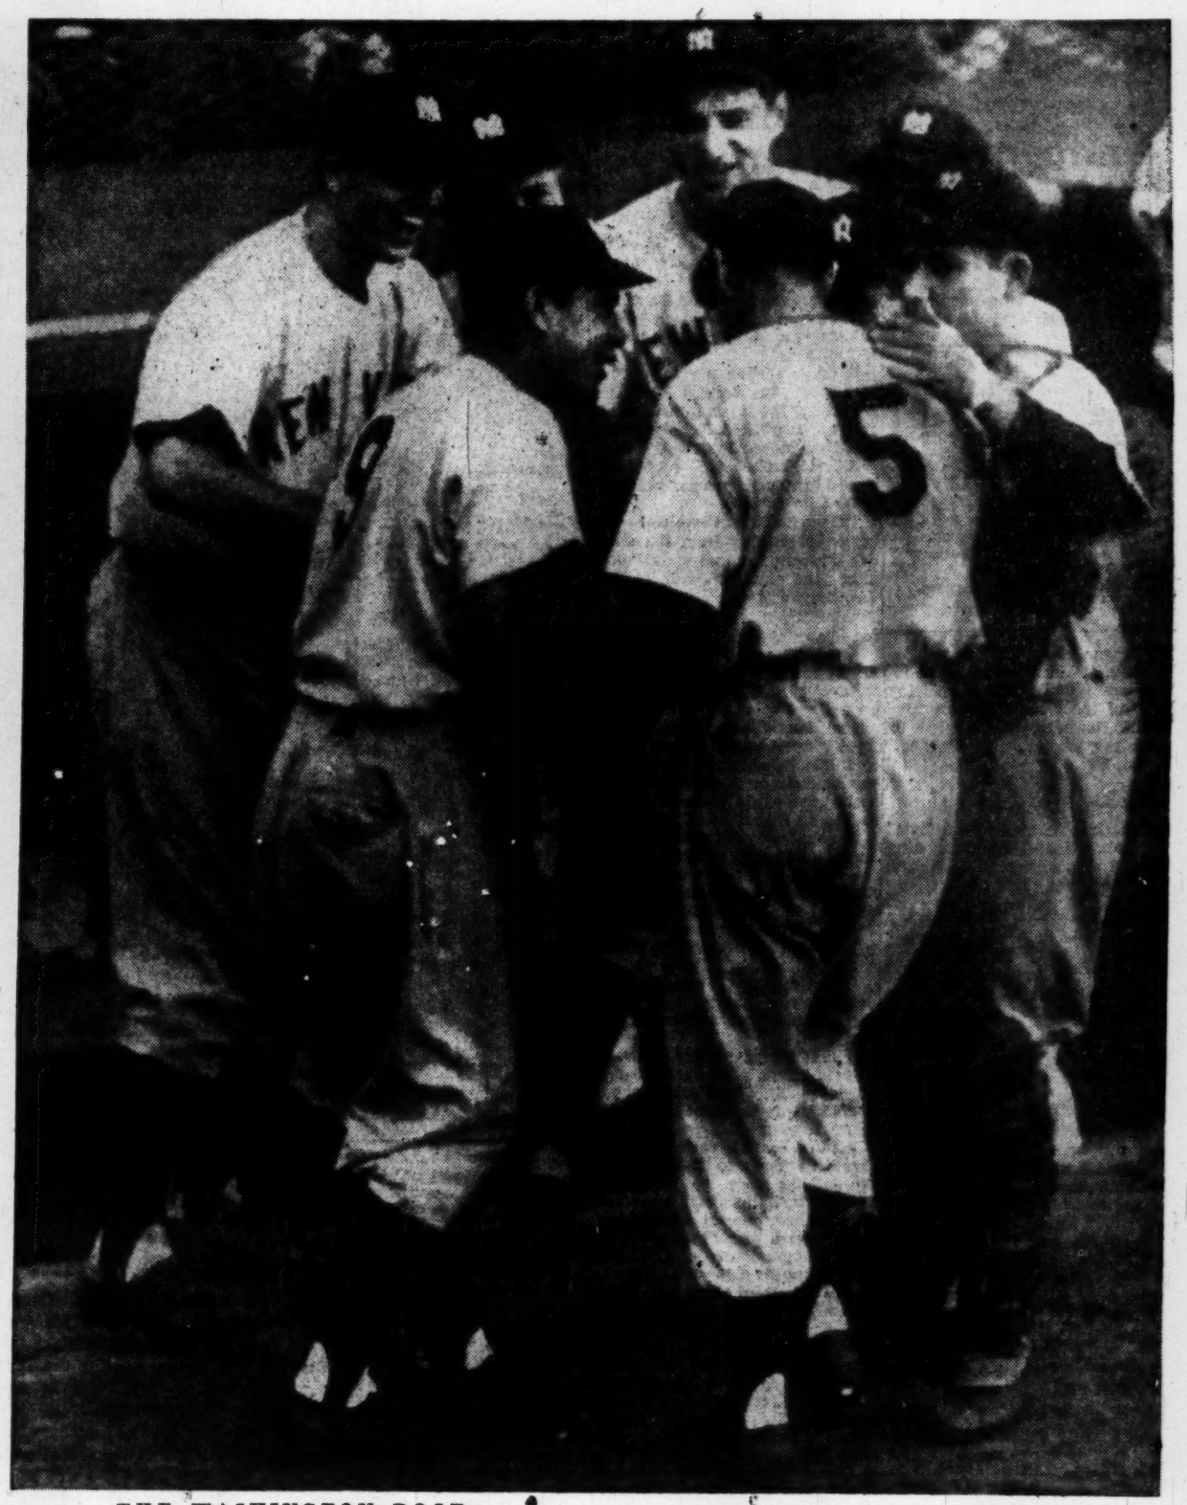
"Happy New Year!"



Joe's Day—Happy Yankees swarm out of the dugout to congratulate Joe DiMaggio (5) after his homer in the fourth. They are (clockwise) Charlie Keller, Gerry Coleman, Jim Turner, Tommy Henrich and Yogi Berra. Joe's was the sentimental hit of the series.

V. M. I. Resents Piling Up Score

Lexington, Va., Oct. 9 (AP).—V.M.I. Coach Tom Nugent charged tonight that William and Mary's Indians "obviously went all out to run up a big score" in yesterday's W. & M.-V. M. I. football game at Williamsburg.

The Indians won the game, 54-6.

"It would be a pleasure to meet William and Mary with a V. M. I. team of even approximate manpower," Nugent said here when asked for comment on the Southern Conference contest.

Cleveland Loses First Since 1947

By Russ Newland

San Francisco, Oct. 9 (AP).—The San Francisco Forty-Niners ran wild to score a 56-28 victory over the defending champion Cleveland Browns and take the lead in the All-America Conference before 59,770 fans.

It was a thrill-a-minute contest. Southpaw Quarterback Frankie Albert led the locals to a win that saw the Browns defeated for the first time since November, 1947.

Albert broke the conference record for touchdown passes in one game with five.

Title-defending Cleveland was beaten practically from the start. San Francisco scored six minutes after the kickoff with Albert throwing a touchdown pass to Right Half John Strzykalski, good for 16 yards.

A minute and 20 seconds later, Albert connected with Ally Beals for a 41-yard gain to the one-foot line. Strzykalski went over.

The Forty-Niners made it 21-0 shortly after when Albert passed to Fullback Joe Perry, who made a one-handed running catch and dashed five yards. The scoring play started on Cleveland's 28.

San Francisco recovered a Cleveland fumble on the latter's 16 in the second period and Albert threw a touchdown pass to Beals at the goal line. Just before the half ended Albert passed eight yards to Left End Nick Susoeff to climax a 63-yard march.

Otto Graham, Cleveland's great pass-throwing quarterback, tossed three touchdown passes in the first half.

A first period marker ended an 89-yard drive. Graham passed 35 yards to Bill Boedeker and 10 and 39 yards to Mac Speedie, the latter scoring.

In the second period Graham threw 26 yards to Dante Lavelli for another score.

The third Cleveland touchdown saw Graham connect with Speedie on a 12-yard touchdown effort after he had previously hit Right Half Dub Jones for a 41-yard gain.

In the third quarter, Albert threw a 24-yard touchdown pass to Left Half Eddie Carr.

Perry ran through the entire Cleveland team for a 49-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter and Carr completed the rout when he dashed 5 yards for another shortly before the game ended.

Cleveland made its fourth touchdown on a 91-yard drive starting late in the third period and ending in the fourth. Fullback Marion Motley ripped off the last 12 yards after a Graham pass to Left Half Edgar Jones had netted 31 yards.

IT'S A TOUCHDOWN!—The ball is caught in mid-air as its zips from Sammy Baugh to Hugh (Bones) Taylor for the first Redskin touchdown yesterday at Griffith Stadium. Taylor took Baugh's 11-yard flip and raced 17 yards into the end zone despite Ray Coates' goal-line try for the tackle. When it was all over, however, the New York Giants had a 45-35 margin

Dons Thump Buffalo In Passing Duel, 42-28

Los Angeles, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Los Angeles Dons cashed in on two enemy fumbles, breaking up a passing duel between their Glenn Dobbs and George Ratterman, and went on to defeat the Buffalo Bills, 42 to 28, in an All-American Conference Football game before 16,757 fans today.

The first break came in the third quarter with the score tied at 28-28 in the torrid battle between Dobbs and the Buffalo ace.

Halfback Veto Kissell of Buffalo, hit hard as he smacked the line, fumbled on his own 38-yard stripe.

It took the Dons six plays to score and break the deadlock.

They clinched the game in the fourth when halfback Joe Sutton let a Ratterman pass get away from him. Abner Wimmerly, Los Angeles reserve end, grabbed the loose ball and stepped 33 yards down the sidestripe to bring the score to 42-28.

The victory, a surprise for the scant gathering in huge Memorial Coliseum, ended a four-game Don losing string

The Dobbs-Ratterman cross-fire was hectic. "Billy the Kid," from Buffalo, collected 305 yards via the air and connected with two touchdown strikes. Triple-threat star Dobbs amassed 283 yards passing, 48 more running, and also passed for two direct tallies and set the stage for three other scoring thrusts.

Buffalo got off to a seven point lead, added 14 more in the second half, but Dobbs evened the count by halftim with a thr touchdown splurge. The Bills got seven more in the third but the locals scored 14 to take the lead and eventually the ball game.

Fullback Ollie Cline rambled 35 yards for the first Buffalo touchdown after Dobbs had fumbled away the ball on the first play from scrimmage.

Waterfield Leads Rams Over Bears

four-yard touchdown dart and a safety. The Ram's V. T. Smith was nailed in the end zone. Lujack added after both Bear touchdowns.

But that was the Bear works, and Los Angeles was just warming up. A 56-yard Los Angeles scoring march was capped by Waterfield's 10-yard shot to Fears in the end zone.

Then Waterfield, who completed 15 of 33 passes for 217 yards, worked a screen pass to Hirsch, covering 14 yards for a touchdown. That left the Rams trailing only 17-16 at halftime.

Another Payoff Pass

In the third period, Waterfield whipped a 26-yard payoff pass to Shaw for a 24-16 Los Angeles lead. Then came the last period touchdown gallop by Hirsch.

The Bears nibbled away at the fierce-charging Ram line for 81 rushing yards, while the Rams gained 124. Chicago's passing trio of Lujack, Blanda and Sid Luckman completed 12 of 32 tosses, but the 251 Bear yards by passing generally were wasted.

Underdog Giants Blast 'Skins, 45-35

New Yorkers Come Back With Three Quick Touchdowns

lor and completed seven out of 15 tosses.

But Gilmer, his understudy, was put in comand of the Redskins as the second half started. Baugh was used on only two pass plays, on both of which Halfback Emlen Tunnell chalked up interceptions, while Gilmer was hanging up a record of nine completions in 21 throws, good for 166 yards and one of the 'Skins' last-ditch scoring thrusts in the waning minutes.

In more detail the scoring came in the following order:

FIRST PERIOD—Redskins penalized for offsides on the first play, after which Gilmer throws a pass from behind his own 15. Tunnel intercepts and goes to the 12. Roberts hits off right guard, breaks away from Tommy Mont and goes over with 50 seconds elapsed. Ben Agajanian kicks the first of his six straight extra points.

Gilmer's second passing attempt is intercepted by Ray Coates, so Baugh goes in after a Giant field goal attempt is wide. Old Sammy hurls three times to Taylor, for six, 31 and 28 yards, the last toss accounting for a touchdown after Taylor runs 17 yards, and eludes Coates' dive at his heels. Dick Poillon kicks the first of five straight extra points.

Pass interference called on Washington's Howie Livingston gives the Giants a first down on the Redskin 10, and four plays later, on the end of a 48-yard drive, Joe Scott of San Francisco piles over from one yard out.

The 'Skins tie it up, 14-14, on the second play after the kickoff. Rob Goode gets two yards to the Redskin 24, and the Baugh-to-Taylor combine works for the remaining 76. Again Taylor outruns Coates as he romps 48 yards straight down the middle.

SECOND PERIOD—Livingston intercepts Conerly's pass and reaches the New York 46, where Baugh starts things moving again. Included in the scoring march is Baugh's own 16-yard dash and an 11-yard heave to Dan Sandifer. Fullback Pete Stout slants off left tackle for the last yard and a 21-14 lead for Washington.

A highly controversial pass interference penalty called against Livingston is the Giants' big break in an 80-yard march to another tie. The Giants are given the ball on Washington's 31 and Conerly passes 17 yards to Ray Poole. On third down the Giants need 21 yards for a first down, but Conerly gives them a touchdown as he passes from back of the 25. It's a high lob that Poillon watches drop safely into Noah Mullin's arms in the end zone.

The Redskins move 41 yards under Baugh's urging, but fizzle on the New York 34. In four plays the Giants are down to the Redskin 32, from behind which point Agajanian boots the 3-pointer that gives New York a 24-21 edge at the half.

THIRD PERIOD—Washington is on the move right after the kickoff and on its sixth play Gilmer drops a beautiful pass in the arms of Taylor, who runs the last 32 yards on a 64-yard play. The skins are penalized, however, and Poillon eventually kicks. From midfield the Giants romp on two Conerly passes, one to Poole for 29 yards, and the second to Cletus Fischer for 25 yards, into a 31-21 advantage.

Harry Dowda fumbles the first time Washington runs a play, Coates recovers for New York, and two plays later its 38-21. Conerly hits Poole for 15 yards and then Roberts for 25. The last is an easy six-pointer with the nearest D. C. defender, Sandifer, some 75 feet away.

But Sandifer is definitely in action on the following kickoff. He gathers in Agajanian's kick on his own 2, feints to his right and then takes out toward the left. Despite a fine block by Fullback Leon Cochran his journey is ended after 70 yards by Frank LoVuolo on the Giant 28. A roughing penalty against the New Yorkers moves the 'Skins to within 13 yards of a score, where Baugh takes over—headed for more Redskin trouble.

The first Baugh pass swiped by Tunnell goes for another Giant touchdown a few-seconds later. The Negro star from Iowa moves from the goal line to New York's 38. The Giants have been pushed back slightly when Roberts, breaking on a line through the middle, gets in the clear and outsprints Conerly, Castoff Of D. C. Pros, Sets Pace in Triumph

Livingston and Frank Seno on a 64-yard touchdown play.

FOURTH PERIOD—One of Gilmer's passes is dropped by Livingston in the end zone before the Redskins start their hopeless rally. It's finally the longest pass of the day, 43 yards in the air, that Crisler grabs on the five-yard line and carries over.

A fair exchange of fumbles by Gilmer and the Giants' Bernie Mertes features the closing minutes as New York tries to run out the clock and Washington, needing three touchdowns to win, passes desperately. Finally Tackle John Adams falls on Mertes' bobble at the Redskin 28 and from there Gilmer completes three passes in a row to the New York three. Stout takes one for 6. Goode thunders 54 yards with another. Eddie Saenz takes the third for 9. Stout's try at the line moves up to the 1-yard line and Livingston plunges over.

It's much too late to do anything about that 10-point deficit after that.

They Face Semmler And Morris

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Ralph Bogart and Jerry Hart, defending champions in the Maryland State Golf Association's four-ball championship, playing from Annapolis Roads, advanced to the final round with a 3 and 2 win over Billy Baumgartner and Nick Conte of Bonnie View, of Baltimore, yesterday at Burning Tree Country Club.

They will meet Bob Morris and Eddie Semmler of Prince Georges in the final. Morris and Semmler upset Jim Gardner and Claude Rippey of Washington, 4 and 3, in yesterday's match. Gardner and Rippey were finalist in last year's tournament.

The Bogart-Hart, Morris-Semmler championship match will be played Sunday October 23 at a course to be selected by the Maryland State Association.

The final was originally set for next Sunday but was postponed one week as both Bogart and Morris are members of the Washington team which will meet a 16-man team of Virginia amateurs at Charlottesville, Va., next Sunday.

Both winning combinations were two strokes over par for the holes played yesterday.

COLUMBIA — C. C. Dodge and Merle Thorpe defeated Dr. James Dusbabek, 4 and 3, to win the Columbia member-guest Invitational.

The defeated eights went to Karl Corby and Bus Fleming, who defeated Don Kneessi and Dwight Kendall, 1 up. Second flight was won by Dick Essex and Jack Barr with a 4-and-2 win over Dermott and Peter Nee. Jack Hodges and E. J. Orme won the third flight, 2 up, over Walter and Judson Dillard.

ARGYLE — Betty Garber, women's club champ, and Dick Mothershead, men's champ, combined to win low gross in a mixed scotch foursome tournament yesterday with a 73.

Helena Meyers and Bob Stearn, 87—19—68; Claire Baum and James Atkinson, 92—24—68, and Doris Rothwell and Ray Stackhouse, 91—23—68, all tied for low net. Fourth net also ended in a tie, Hazel Beall and Perry Miller, 85—16—69, being matched by Carolyn Foley and Bob Harmon, 76—7—69.

BETHESDA—Tony Popolaski defeated Tom Manning, 1 up, in a semifinal club championship match. All even after 17 holes, Manning was on the green, 6 feet from the pin, in two while Popolaski was still off the carpet. Popoliski chipped up dead and got his four while Manning three putted to lose the match, 1 up. The Jerry Hart-Jack Ferguson match was postponed because of Ferguson's illness.

PRINCE GEORGES—Gil Willett shot a 73 medal play round to upset defending champion, Mike Jankowski, 3 and 2, in a club championship quarterfinal.

Eddie Johnson, a former champ, advanced with a 3 and 2 win over George Voigt, another former titleholder. Joe Balestri, still another former king, knocked Jack Dempsey out of the running with a 3 and 1 win.

WASHINGTON—J. S. Mehr downed D. V. McCarthy, 2 and 1, to win the Miller Cup while the Jenkins trophy went to Dr. W. R. McAllister for his win from C. R. Courtney, 1 up.

Mrs. O. M. Hines dropped a No. 5 iron shot on the eleventh green and watched it roll into the cup from a hole-in-one. The 174-yard ace was witnessed by Mrs. James Gardiner, Joanne Jones, and Mrs. W. O. Walsh.

INDIAN SPRING—Mr. and Mrs. Gus Sasscer, 86-87—173—24—149, and Dr. and Mrs. Sid Abramson, 86-117—203—54—149, tied for the low net prize in the husband and wife tournament and will play off the tie next week. Low gross went to the George Thorntons, 76-92—168.

KENWOOD—Dr. W. F. Luckett reversed his score of last week, adding an 87 to his opening 78 but his 28 handicap still allowed him to finish in front in the Hodges trophy play with a 137 net. C. A. Gnan, 80-82—24—138 was second and H. B. Hunt, 80-81—20—141, third.

A Longer View of The Myth of Union Invincibility

[THE TREND—from the Oct. 8, 1949, issue of BUSINESS WEEK]

More than a million men were on strike this week. The dead weight of their idleness hung as a pall over the nation and darkened the business outlook. Protracted stoppages in steel and coal will slow down the pace of all business to a disastrously low rate.

That was everyone's short-run worry. But there is need for a longer view. In perspective, the 1949 labor crisis can turn out to be an important milestone on the long uphill road to a reinvigorated enterprise system in America.

Look at the situation this way: An influential group of employers have raised their sights beyond their immediate economic interest and have taken on a battle for a principle important to every business in the land. They have decided that the time has come—right now—to stop appeasing labor leaders.

Prosperity Can Be a Mirage

The steel industry could have knuckled under to the union pressure, and the business index would have continued zooming along at its high level—for a while. But it would have bought peace by strengthening the myth of union invincibility. It would only have deferred a little longer the inevitable showdown—the showdown which has to come when industry finally says "No" to the impossible demands of union leaders and means it. And, meanwhile, it would have fortified the union leaders with new success, new confidence, new ideas of employer supineness. Business prosperity bought on such terms is a mirage. It is like mistaking as a glow of health the flush of fever on the face of a man seriously ill.

Give the steel industry credit for recognizing that collective bargaining must be a two-way street if economic freedom is to be preserved. And give the steel industry credit for taking on a fight it could have easily ducked because it believed an important principle had to be defended. By making that fight, next year's business outlook—and the whole future of the enterprise system in America—is made perceptibly brighter.

1946 a Parallel

Then there is another thing which picket lines across the country bring to mind. The last time the steel industry was struck and our strike idle figure topped a million was in 1946. The labor aggression of that year had a significant effect upon public opinion. Made apprehensive about union excesses, the voters changed the complexion of Congress in the 1946 elections. That new Congress passed the Taft-Hartley act.

Many people took the Taft-Hartley act as the definitive answer to our labor problems. They felt that the passage of that statute redressed the obvious imbalance which existed between the bargaining power of unions and management. They felt that the law established sufficient safeguards for the public interest in labor disputes.

It should now be evident to everyone that, while an important first step, the Taft-Hartley act is not the full legal code needed to stabilize the labor front. The events of this week demonstrate that it should be supplemented by a ban on industry-wide bargaining.

A Monopolist at the Table

For, in both steel and coal, monopolistic union leaders attempting to dictate industry-wide terms are responsible for the impasse blocking a way to settlement. The longer these strikes last, the more apparent it must become to the public that a direct cause and effect relationship exists between industry-wide bargaining and labor turmoil and dictation.

The picture that comes to mind when you think of bargaining in steel is Philip Murray—one man—seated at one side of one conference table. For bargaining in steel is done on labor's part by a monopolist.

Murray really has a monopoly of virtually all productive labor in the steel industry. He decides what he thinks should be the going rate for that labor all over the country. Then, he tells the whole industry to pay it. He doesn't allow one of his union locals to bargain with one company management in competition with other union locals. He doesn't give any regard for special circumstances faced by Company A and its union local competing for their economic lives with Company B and others. He uses the power which his union members give him to bargain on an industry-wide basis.

In coal, the picture is the same. There you see John L. Lewis wielding the power of his union single-handedly. Coal companies can compete against each other in production, marketing, pricing, and research. But they cannot compete with each other in bargaining with their employees. Why? Because Lewis bargains with the industry as a whole.

The potency of his concentrated control is demonstrated by his ability to decide how much coal is to be mined, whether the miners are to work a six-day week, a three-day week, or a no-day week. He imposes precisely the same conditions upon an entire industry.

If the trend toward industry-wide bargaining runs unchecked, competitive business as we have known it in America will disappear. Legislation putting a ban on industry-wide bargaining now appears to be the only way to protect competition in an important area of economic life.

Time for Action

Industry-wide bargaining won't be abolished by wishful thinking. Action is needed The first step is to condition public thinking.

It is up to the businessman to see that the "educational opportunities," which the current crops of strikes provide, are fully realized. Employers—not only in coal and steel, but in every line—have an important responsibility to their own companies and to their country in this regard. If industry gets the facts across to its own employees and to its communities, these strikes may be a turning point. Every citizen should be made to feel his own great stake in management's refusal to go on appeasing labor bosses and in putting an end to industry-wide dictation by monopolistic labor leaders.

Because of the vital implications of the nation-wide steel and coal strikes to every citizen, I am devoting this 78th in my series of editorial messages to BUSINESS WEEK's current Trend. No issue, to my mind, is now of more significance to the continuance of a free economic society in America.

Legislative Employes May Be Surprised With a Pay Boost

Legislative employes will get a surprise pay boost this week if present plans are carried out.

Senator Downey (D., Calif.) is spearheading a bipartisan bloc of Senators who will seek to place a rider on the final appropriation bill providing for the higher salaries. The rider will propose:

A flat 5 percent raise for all rank-and-file legislative employes; $15,000 salaries for officials elected by Congress, and $12,000 paychecks for Senate administrative assistants and top committee clerks.

Pay boosts for about 1,400,000 Government people are provided in bills that are likely to be approved this week by Congress. Legislative people aren't included in any of the measures. Members of Congress have been reminded of this fact repeatedly during the past several weeks by their own employes.

On the pay-raise front, conferees on the top-flight pay bill will meet today. Final action on it is anticipated.

NEW CHAIRMAN? The Civil Service Commission may get a new chairman this week. The nomination is slated to go to the Senate momentarily. A score of Government people are after the post. The nominee is expected to be from outside Government.

STORY: It happened during Senate debate on the postal pay-raise bill. Senator Downey was speaking in defense of the Postoffice Department and its employes. He said he once received a postal card reading: "I hope you roast a thousand years in hell for every minute I have wasted over my income tax."

"For a single penny, a man can mail a postal card from his home in San Diego, have it gathered up, sorted at the postoffice, put on a train, transported 3000 miles across the rivers, mountains and plains, delivered in Washington, and placed on top of a Senator's desk. If that is not excellent service for 1 cent I do not know what could be.

"But the great lesson which I derived from that incident was that there was a citizen who was willing to write an open message telling his Senator to go to hell. Could anything show greater democracy than that?"

JOB NEWS: Civil Service plans to give its next general clerical exam by the middle of next month. More than 10,000 persons here applied for it. Many of those who qualify will be offered temporary Census Bureau jobs . . . The last half of the secretarial exam also is slated to be given early next month. Applicants, however, shouldn't build up their hopes since there will be very few available jobs. Most secretarial jobs are filled by promotions from within . . . An exam for film inspector, $2724 a year to start, is open at Fort Myer, Va. . . . A test for calculating machine operator, $2088, is open to fill vacancies in the Social Security Administration in Baltimore . . . Exams for miscellaneous office machine operator, $2284 to $2724, to fill vacancies in the State of Maryland except in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties is open . . . A similar test is open for Virginia jobs except in Alexandria and Arlington. Get details at Civil Service's fourth regional office, Tempo R Building, Third st. and Jefferson drive, sw.

VA: Representative Edith Rogers (R., Mass.) is opposed to transfer of 5500 temporary clerical Census jobs to Philadelphia. She wants the project located in Boston. Mrs. Rogers says that 1700 VA employes must be moved in Philadelphia to make way for the Census people and that it would result in delay of services to veterans.

EXAMS: The following is an up-to-the-minute list of Civil Service tests now open here: stenographer and typist, student dietitian, clinical psychologist, aeronautical research scientist, dietitian, geologist, engineer, coal mine inspector, oceanographer, accountant and auditor, astronomer, printer, patent examiner, policeman, fireman, medical officer, agricultural research scientist, librarian, geographer, draftsman, pharmacologist, proofreader, veterinarian, physical science administrator, cartographic survey aid, highway engineer, medical X-ray technician, teacher, cartographic aid, cartographer, public health educator, information specialist and aviation safety agent.

Boy's Raccoon Goes to Zoo, Escapes Becoming Coonskin

The Washington Post
Peter Hershfield hands pet raccoon over to Zookeeper B. J. Barker

Nine-year-old Peter Hershfield's pet raccoon took up quarters at the Zoo yesterday as a refugee from threats of conversion into a coonskin cap.

Peter, the son of Leo Hershfield, writer and illustrator, and Mrs. Hershfield, of 325 Queen st., Alexandria, found the coon, then a baby, while vacationing at Broomes Island, Md., a few months ago.

Patrick, as Peter named the coon after his sex was determined, promptly took over the Hershfield home. He quickly got into Mrs. Hershfield's hair—literally, that is. A confirmed kleptomaniac, he would steal the hairpins right out of her hair and hide them.

Slept in Drawer

What's more, the coon usurped the elder Hershfield's shirt drawer for sleeping quarters.

Mrs. Hershfield, of course, agreed with Peter that Patrick was a right smart coon. He could open doors in the house, get into the tightest tins containing sweet things and, when hunting crabs on the beach, knew enough to pick only the soft-shelled ones.

According to Peter, Patrick's voice can express his feelings almost as well as a human being's can. It can be a plaintive whine, when he is scared by a thunderstorm or by cats; a stormy growl, when he is angry at someone who has found one of his hiding places for loot, or a soaring trill, when he is happy, as he was whenever the Hershfields let him go sailing with them in their skipjack.

Head Keeper Sympathetic

But when Patrick began going out almost every night, they decided the time had come for him to find another home. It was the coonskin cap suggestion from Peter's father that finally clinched the argument.

Both Peter and Patrick cried when they parted at the Zoo, but Frank Lowe, head keeper, who has solved other parents' pet problems in the past, assured Peter he could come up any time to visit Patrick.

2 Men Slug Motorist, Take Wallet

Thugs Board Auto As Driver Parks In S.E. Street and Flee With His $35

A Washington motorist was struck over the head and robbed of $35 early yesterday by two thugs, who told him they were "taking over."

The victim, Austin W. Bell, 40, of 5520 Parkland Ct., District Heights, Md., told police he was parking his car in the 1600 block of K st. se., shortly before 1 a. m. when two men approached him.

The men told him they were "taking over," climbed into his car and ordered him to drive to 37th st. and Alabama av. se.

There one of the pair hit Bell on the head with an unidentified weapon, while the other rifled his pockets, removing a wallet containing $35. The assailants then fled.

Bell was treated at Gallinger Hospital for head cuts, and transferred to Mt. Alto Hospital, where his condition was reported not serious.

He described his assailants as white, in the early 20s, with one wearing brown trousers and a brown tweed jacket while the other was dressed in tan slacks and a brown sport coat.

In other reported robberies, Charles L. Fromeberger, 41, of 1023 8th st. nw., said he was robbed of $8 shortly after midnight yesterday by a man who threatened him with a knife in the 1100 block of Congress st. nw.

Esther Webster, 77 of 48 Bates st. nw., told police a heavy-set man described only as a Negro snatched her pocketbook containing $7 as she was walking near her home about 7 p. m. Saturday.

3 Injured in Fights Taken to Hospitals

Three persons were in hospitals yesterday as a result of fights.

Lillie Mae Clayton, 23, of 711 G st. sw., was treated at Gallinger and held for observation of stomach stab wounds she said she suffered late Saturday during an argument with an unidentified man at 9th and E sts. sw.

Charles Hammond, 25, of 437 M st. nw., was cut about the head and arms during a fight in a hallway at 1414 8th st. nw., early yesterday. He was reported in a satisfactory condition at Freedmen's Hospital.

Edward Taylor, 41, of 1115 9th st. nw., suffered head injuries when he was hit with a brick early yesterday during a fight in the 600 block of 3d st. nw. Casualty Hospital reported his condition undetermined.

Two Deaths Result From Accidents in Area Traffic

D. C. Lawyer Fatally Hurt by CTC Bus; Farmer Is Crushed Between Two Cars

District traffic deaths this year 52
Deaths this date last year . . 53
Total traffic death, 1948 67

Traffic accidents in the District area claimed the lives yesterday of a Washington attorney and a Foote, Md., farmer.

The farmer's death resulted when he was crushed between two parked cars after one of them was struck by a third vehicle.

He was Henry Arnold, 67. He died at Casualty Hospital at 1:20 p. m., a few hours after the accident in front of Oxon Hill Inn on Livingston rd. in Prince Georges County, near the District line.

Police said he and Emmett Huntt, 47, of 5261 Oxon Hill rd., Oxon Hill, Md., had left the inn and were walking between the parked cars to Arnold's truck when a car driven by George White, 39, of Port Tobacco, Md., ran off the road and crashed into one of the parked cars.

Charged With Manslaughter

The impact threw the parked cars together, crushing both Arnold and Huntt. Huntt suffered cuts and bruises and was able to leave Casualty Hospital after treatment. White, who told police his steering gear locked, was charged with manslaughter and held under $500 bond.

The attorney, Harry S. Hall, 65, who lived at Fredericksburg, Va., was injured Friday when struck by a Capital Transit bus at 13th st. and New York ave. nw. He died yesterday at Emergency Hospital. Doctors said he suffered head injuries.

He practiced law here with Josephus C. Trimble. A native of Knoxville, Tenn., and a graduate of the University of Tennessee, he came to Washington as secretary to the late Senator John K. Shields (D., Tenn.). He was a member of the District of Columbia, Maryland, New York and Tennessee bars.

Walking With Light

Police said Hall was walking with a green light northward across New York ave. The bus, traveling south on 13th st., was making a left turn into New York ave. The bus driver, Hugh N. Hanger, 24, of 237 14th st. ne., was charged after the accident with failure of yield the right-of-way to a pedestrian and held under $300 bond.

Man, Traffic Victim, Dies of Natural Causes

Lish Myers, 57, of 106 50th st. ne., died yesterday at 8:30 a. m. in Mount Alto Hospital following a stroke, although he had been hospitalized as a result of traffic injuries.

Police reported Myers had been struck June 18 as he was standing on a loading platform in the 3200 block of Wisconsin ave. nw.

Driver of the car, identified as Carl Edward Studds, 23, of 3509 Nimitz rd., Kensington, Md., received a suspended sentence and was placed on probation for one year in Municipal Court on charges of leaving after colliding, driving on the wrong side of the street, driving over a safety zone and unreasonable speed.

3000 Attend 65th Anniversary Of Central Union Mission

Nearly 3000 persons yesterday helped the Central Union Mission celebrate its sixty-fifth birthday during a meeting in Constitution Hall.

William H. Ramsey, who attended the mission's third anniversary program 62 years ago, now president of the board of directors of the mission, which is at 613 C st. nw., presided at the meeting.

In his report, the Rev. Herbert E. Eberhardt, superintendent of the mission, said that last year the mission gave 79,510 free meals to homeless men and children.

In addition to two seven-story buildings at 613 C st. nw., and 624 Indiana, the mission owns a 233-acre farm near Brookville, Md., on which is located Camp Bennett, a free summer camp for children.

Children from the camp, the Children's Emergency Home and those who attend the mission's Saturday morning meetings sang at the Constitution Hall meeting.

James L. Kraft, chairman of the board of the Kraft Foods Co., told the audience that "according to the way we use our opportunities as Christians or fail to use them, the world may well survive or perish."

Urging earnest and continuous prayer, Kraft said that "prayer does change things—in our own personal lives and in the lives of others."

"Prayer," he said, "could change the very face of the world."

"If we were all honestly and humbly to ask God to undertake for us, then follow through with what he directed us to do," the Chicago businessman asserted, "we would have no fear of the atomic bomb or anything in the whole wide world."

Kraft was introduced by Representative Ralph Gwinn (R., N. Y.).

Singing at the anniversary meeting was led by Homer Rodeheaver, one-time song leader for Evangelist Billy Sunday. Earlier in the day Rodeheaver appeared at several of the city's churches.

French Girl's Aid To Young Italian Brings Marriage

A 20-year romance will come into full flower Saturday when a Washington advertising man marries a French girl who, as a child, befriended him when he was struck down by infantile paralysis.

Lee Perri, 29-year-old art director of the Courtland Advertising Agency, boarded a plane yesterday for Marseille, home of his fiancee who cared for him 20 years ago after he was stricken in Italy where he was born.

Perri came to this country in 1929 but he never forgot the little girl who was kind to him. He wrote her a letter and the long romance followed. He expects to bring his bride back to this country after the wedding Saturday in Marseille.

Police Search For Suicide Here But Find None

A suicide scare was scotched yesterday when police found the suspected victim receiving treatment for illness at Providence Hospital.

It started at 11:30 p. m. Saturday when park police found an empty auto parked near the Sousa Bridge in Fairlawn Park.

On the front seat was a note stating in part that "I am a veteran of 24 years service, retired from the United States Coast Guard." The note was unsigned.

Harbor police began dragging the Anacostia River but later found that the owner of the car had been brought to Providence Hospital, ill. He was then transferred to a hospital in Baltimore for further care.

Fairfax Boy, 12, Missing From Home

Army Capt. R. E. L. Johnson last night appealed to Greater Washington residents for help in locating his 12-year-old son, missing from their Fairfax County home.

Daniel

Johnson said his red-haired son, Daniel, rode his bicycle away from his home at 1305 Washington ave., Huntington, about 10 a. m. Saturday after leaving the following note on his bed:

"Dad: I have gone for a morning ride. Do not worry."

When the boy failed to return late Saturday afternoon, Captain Johnson notified Fairfax County police, who broadcast a general alarm.

Captain Johnson, who is attached to the joint Brazil-United States Defense Commission here, could offer no explanation for his son's disappearance.

"He was perfectly happy at home, and we have checked his school records and found there was nothing there to make him want to run away," he said.

He described his son as being "small for his age," about four feet eight inches tall, weighing around 70 pounds and having red hair and blue eyes. At the time of his disappearance he was wearing a striped sport shirt, blue dungarees and black and white sneakers.

During Sesqui

32 Hotels Plan No Rate Hikes

The 32 member hotels of the Hotel Association of Washington will not raise rates during the District's Sesquicentennial scheduled to open next April 15.

This was announced yesterday by Bourbon A. Dawes, executive secretary of the association in a letter to Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

Dawes' letter said in part: "As you know it is not within the province of the Hotel Association to determine rates for its member hotels.

"However, because of the civic and community interest as well as that of this association and its member hotels in a successful Sesquicentennial, we have undertaken to poll our 32 member hotels to ascertain, if possible, their various policies with regard to rates during the Sesquicentennial.

"I am happy to report to you that each of the 32 member hotels has replied . . . and there has been unanimous assurance that regular rates will prevail and that there will be no increase in hotel rates during the period of the 1950 Sesquicentennial . . ."

The House this week is expected to give final approval to the three million dollar appropriation for the two-year Sesquicentennial celebration agreed upon in a Senate-House conference last Friday.

Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), chairman of the House District Committee, has issued a statement in which he said:

"I cast an enthusiastic vote for the celebration last time it was up for a vote. I shall talk the situation over with members of the House Appropriations Committee and if I think it will do any good. I'll be on hand (when it comes up this week) with some ammunition."

Two in Plane Hurt in Crash In Maryland

Glider-Type Ship Coming In to Land Drops to Ground

Two men were injured yesterday when their sailplane crashed on the Middleton farm, a mile east of Accokeek, Md.

Clarence Joseph Clements, jr., 29, of 9418 Wire ave., Silver Spring, Md., the pilot, was hospitalized for back injuries reported as not serious at Providence Hospital.

A passenger, Ralph Thomas Queen, 25, of 37 Madison st. nw., suffered shock and bruises, but was not injured seriously enough to be hospitalized.

The men were in a sailplane reportedly owned by the D. C. Soaring Club, Inc., of 65 Galveston st. sw. The plane took off from Beacon Airfield, Alexandria, Va., about 2 p. m., according to airport officials. The crash was about 3 p. m.

The injured men were taken to Providence Hospital by the Maryland State Police ambulance from Waldorf (Md.) substation.

Queen, an engineering student at Catholic University, who has both a sail and power-plane license, said later he is not sure just what happened.

"We had decided we could not make Hyde Field, near Clinton, and had soared over this farm for about 15 minutes preparing for a hard landing," he said.

"We had plenty of air speed and apparently were coming in for a perfect landing when the sailplane dropped suddenly to the ground with a hard crash."

Queen said he thought it possible that a downdraft caused by a hill nearby was the cause.

Queen explained that a sailplane is similar to a glider, but has a greater wing spread.

Clements is a laboratory supervisor at the Engineering Research Corp., Riverdale, Md.

Civil Aeronautics Administration officials were on their way to the scene of the accident last night to determine the cause, according to county police.

Roll Fast on Radio Tipoffs

Garage Wrecking Cranes Battle for Business in Auto Smashups

Watchful wreckers speed nightly to every Washington traffic accident—tipped off by police radios—in a nip-and-tuck scramble for clients.

To get the jump on competitors, investigation showed that one garage has equipped a wrecker with a police radio and keeps the crane truck cruising all night. A second garage owner equips his wreckers with two-way radios for split-second dispatching to the scene of an accident.

Early yesterday morning, for instance, three wrecker drivers converged at 10th st., and Rhode Island ave., nw., in response to a police broadcast of a two-car collision.

Before the wrecked cars had been quickly towed away, one wrecker had been dumped on its side by another, and the air was filled with insults and threats of violence before an audience of several hundred persons.

The wrecker from Red's Garage at 24 H st., ne., arrived first on the scene and had one of the cars back in the garage before the wrecked car's driver was in the hospital, according to the winning rider.

Wreckers from Call Carl, at 614 H st. nw., and the Thirteenth Street Garage, at 1702 13th st. nw., coming a greater distance, arrived in a photo finish minutes later, with sidewalk judges giving the nod to Call Carl.

According to the unwritten rules of the game, Call Carl established claim on the remaining car by being first to slip a towing cable on the wreck, police said.

But trouble started when Call Carl's winch would not work.

Compete for Prize

Immediately, the Thirteenth Street Garage driver, Robert Murray, said he slipped his cable on the car, cast off Call Carl's, and started his winch.

Police said the Call Carl driver insisted on his prior claim and slipped his cable back on again. But something had to give and the Call Carl truck did.

Police said that in hoisting the wrecked car, the Thirteenth Street Garage wrecker dumped the Call Carl truck on its side. Red's wrecker returned to right the Carl wrecker.

The profit in this form of night riding lies not in the towing fees which average $6 in the District, but in the subsequent repair work, officials of the three competitors agreed yesterday. Repair profits are good, they said, and justify the extremes they must go to in getting the towing jobs.

Bernard Thompson, a dispatcher at Call Carl's, said his firm has 20 wreckers, with three spotted at night throughout the city.

A good night will produce eight wrecks for his trucks, he said. A crane operator has to be "good and fast," Thompson said, and careful not to damage the car further.

Thompson said Call Carl has one police radio-equipped crane. Other wreckers are dispatched on the basis of information received over the police radio at the office.

Red's Garage operates three wreckers, only at night. They are equipped with radio telephones, not police radios according to the proprietor, Samuel Gordon.

"If an accident sounds good," he said, "We'll send out two trucks figuring that we might get both cars and we should get at least one."

Gordon said his wreckers confine themselves to the Northeast and Southeast sections in the downtown area.

"The other companies have got too many trucks for us," he explained. "If we go chasing way uptown, the cars they have spotted in the city can beat us."

The 13th st. garage operates with only one wrecker, and a police radio at the garage, Murray said. "We go out on them all," he said, "and I guess we get our share."

Police said yesterday the wrecking companies give them little trouble. Police concern lies in clearing highways as quickly as possible, which fits in with the wrecker's desires.

Police insist, however, that cars cannot be removed without the operators' permission and police permission. In cases where cars are needed by police for further investigation or evidence, they are removed by the police wrecker.

In cases where the operator is unable to give permission to private wreckers because of injuries, the police wrecker also is issued.

'Flying Trio' Hits Racial Intolerance

Racial discrimination and segregation will persist as long as people fear the ridicule of others for dropping racial barriers, an assembly at Catholic University was told last night.

This was brought out by "The Flying Trio"—a Catholic priest, a businessman and a Negro engineer—during a panel discussion.

"Racial discrimination is absurd nonsense from a political, economic and religious viewpoint," the Rev. Joseph F. Cantillon, assistant dean of St. Peter's College, Jersey City, declared.

The cleric added that the greatest difficulty in overcoming discrimination is reducing fear of stigma in those who do not want to practice it.

Engineer Archibald Glover and Julian Reiss, businessman and former member of the New York State Commission Against Discrimination, completed the "Flying Trio," so called because they travel in Reiss' private plane from city to city, preaching tolerance.

Glover said the Negro did not want preferential treatment. "All he wants is a fair deal," he said.

Reiss admitted that fair employment laws could not legislate tolerance, but could punish those who practiced intolerance in economic fields.

About 150 persons attended the forum in McMahon Hall under the sponsorship of the Catholic Interracial Council of Washington and the Catholic University student's interracial group.

A question and answer period followed a panel discussion.

Dinner Tuesday

Salvation Army Chief Due Today

Allan

Commissioner John J. Allan, Chief of Staff of the Salvation Army, and Gen. Omar Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will speak at a dinner at 7 p. m. Tuesday in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

The Salvation Army official will arrive in Washington today to confer with leaders of the Salvation Army and the United States Government.

Commissioner Allan, who holds also the rank of Colonel in the United States Army, is the only American Salvation Army officer to be appointed to international leadership in the Salvation Army during its 45 years of service.

He worked with Francis Matthews, now Secretary of the Navy, on the plan to coordinate wartime religious agencies into the single agency that later became a part of the United Service Organization (USO).

He is also a charter member of the American Legion.

Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, will preside at the dinner in honor of Commissioner Allan.

Debs Dubbed 'Fifi' Found Ruling Roster

New York, Oct. 9 (AP). — Ever wonder what debutantes talk about among themselves?

On the basis of the complete deb roster for 1949-50, it is possible to reconstruct a typical conversation:

"Hello, Fifi! Did Gini tell you what Didi told her about Fifi's friend Cici?"

"No, but Gopher phoned and said Pooh was coming over. She's bringing Daze and Pebble."

The deb list contains the nicknames of some 400 female youngsters making their bow to society.

"Fifi is the favorite. There's a Fifi Ford, a Fifi Harding and a Fifi Hunter. "Mimi" gets a fair play, too. Mimi Mills and Mimi Winston, for instance.

Then come Gini Turpin, Didi Bultinck, Gigi Burch and Cini Foy.

Dr. Leonor Michaelis

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Dr. Leonor Michaelis, 74, for years a leading medical scientist and physical chemist, died in Rockefeller Hospital today after a series of heart attacks.

A onetime assistant in Berlin to Dr. Paul Ehrlich, Nobel prize winner and discoverer of Salversan, Dr. Michaelis made many contributions to chemistry and biology. From 1926 to 1929 he was a resident lecturer at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

His latest work was the discovery of the radical vitamin E—which is recognized as the anti-sterility factor.

Heart Patients Get Therapy At Homes

Occupational therapy for adults and children confined to their homes with heart ailments will be provided under a new program announced yesterday by the Washington Heart Association.

The program will begin as soon as a qualified occupational therapist can be secured, according to Dr. Bernard J. Walsh, chairman of the association's program committee.

Relaxation and new activities for recreation and retraining will be the aim of the program, for which the association has allocated a preliminary sum of $3300, Dr. Walsh said.

The activities may include wood carving, leather work, hand weaving and work with plastics.

No estimate has been made of how many patients can be served. Dr. Clayton Ethridge, head of the George Washington Hospital cardiac clinic, one of the seven in the city, estimates that 160 patients are treated there each month, and of these at least 10 percent need occupational therapy.

Dr. Walsh pointed out that this will be the first such service for adults here. Therapy for children with cardiac ailments has been available.

Gains Claimed In War on Virus Growths

A significant forward step in the search for a means to halt harmful virus growth was reported here yesterday by three University of Michigan researchers.

The trio, reporting at the annual meeting of the Electron Microscope Society, told of their success of plotting "growth curves" of two plant viruses, tomato bushy stunt and tobacco mosaic viruses.

"Now, for the first time," reported Dr. Robley Williams, professor of physics, "precise measurements can be made of the effects of chemical and physical agents on the growth of plant virus. We'll be able to show what things speed growth and what slows them down. We're most interested in the latter."

Although the electron microscopic studies were made only on the two plant viruses, he said, investigators should be able to apply the same techniques to study animal viruses. Animal viruses, however, are less easy to purify—a necessary step to the plotting of their "growth curves," he added.

The process described involves "fixing" specimens of the virus under progressive stages of development, and counting the number of virus molecules in any given quantity of virus suspension. The "growth curves" show the rate at which the viruses grow.

With extension of the technique to purified solutions of animal viruses, such as the common cold virus, it was pointed out, researchers could experiment with drugs to find one which might stop virus growth. If such a drug could be found that is harmless to human beings, the world would have a cure for the common cold.

Potentialities of the technique in study of other viruses, such as those in infantile paralysis and sleeping sickness, can also be considered, the researchers said.

Electron microscopes, which magnify hundreds of times greater than optical microscopes, are needed to count and plot viruses.

District BPW to Open National Celebration At YWCA Tonight

ACROSS the Nation through Saturday, women will observe the twenty-second anniversary of National Business Women's Week under the auspices of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc. Theme will be, "Boost your town—It boosts you." Here in Washington the D. C. BPW will inaugurate its celebration with an open meeting tonight, at 9 o'clock at the YWCA.

In keeping with the national theme, business women will be urged to treat Washington as their home town by participating actively in all civic affairs. This means being well informed about local government, the local school systems and churches as well as cultural activities, says Miss Mary C. Ahern, chairman of BPW activities this week.

Principal speaker at the public session tonight will be Fenton Moran, executive secretary of the William J. Kerbey Foundation. His topic will be "Democracy and Human Worth." Miss Maria de la Hull, currently playing the lead in the Columbia Light Opera production of "Faust," will be guest artist.

Luncheon to Close Week

BUSINESS Women's Week will close here with a luncheon Saturday, October 15, at the Wardman Park Hotel, when members of nearby BPW Clubs in Virginia and Maryland will join the celebration. Frederick P. H. Siddons, president, Washington Board of Trade, will be among the honor guests. Representative John L. McMillan of South Carolina will be guest speaker.

Purpose of Business Women's Week is to spotlight the part that women are playing in community and world affairs. It has the support of President Truman and many prominent Government officials.

In a letter to Dr. K. Frances Scott, president, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, President Truman gave whole-hearted support to the theme chosen this year by the NFBPW for its observance of National Business Women's Week. "Democracy, like charity, begins at home," he said, "and you are stressing good works on the community level."

"Because of the present preeminence of our country in international affairs," the President's message continued, "it is more than necessary that our economy remain healthy and prosperous and that our democracy retain its vigor. We need have no fear of losing that world position, with all that it means for lasting peace and widespread human freedoms, so long as the informed women of America are prepared to take up the cudgels for our way of life in the communities of the Nation."

GLOBE-TROTTER representatives of 28 national organizations will congregate in Washington, October 16-18, for the World Town Hall Seminar. It will be a reunion for the some 30 men and women, who accompanied "America's Town Meeting" on a world tour of 12 foreign capitals this summer.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder will be principal speaker at a luncheon for seminar members October 18 at the Washington Hotel. Cabinet members, Congressmen, Government officials as well as diplomatic heads are expected to attend.

Sometime during the two-day stay seminar members will be received by Secretary of State Dean Acheson at an informal conference.

Six of the seminar members are heads of women's organizations. They include Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president, General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Anna Lord Strauss, president, League of Women Voters of the United States; Mrs. Edith S. Sampson, National Council of Negro Women; Dr. Althea K. Hottel, president, American Association of University Women; Miss Sadja Stokowiski, United States National Student Association, and Mrs. Grace Hare Frye, Town Meeting Association.

Dean Hottel will be one of four speakers Tuesday, when the "America's Town Meeting" reports on "How America Can Contribute to a Free World." Others will be Chester S. Williams, director, World Town Hall Seminar; George H. Wilson, president, American Farm Bureau Federation, and Brooks Emeny, president, Foreign Policy Association.

Three seminars will be held with State Department officials Monday and Tuesday to report on conditions in the Far East, the Near East and Europe.

Teach Child Proprieties In Kind Way

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If adults will look back into their own childhood they will remember acts and see them with an adult viewpoint. In my own recollection is the memory of a little boy, about my own age of close to 4 years, unhitching his pants, for some reason or another, and a neighbor glaring out of a back window and saying loudly, "You horrid children."

It took me years to be aware of the significance of her remark and her viewpoint. But even then, guiltless, I felt wicked and naughty without knowing why I should.

A mother wrote me in despair of the ostracism practiced by a neighbor because her child was seen kissing this neighbor's small son. The little girl explained that they were playing house and the mother always kissed the father good night! Only another neighbor's interpretation made this seem the act of two children in premature love-making.

Children do play house and imitate the behavior they see at home. They play doctor and undress each other. And, if this happens to two children of different sexes there is always someone to put a "nasty" interpretation upon it.

When this happens to children they may not be aware of the crime which they are supposed to have committed, but there is a flavor of unpleasantness which remains with them to color the experience unhappily.

When a mother catches her children in situations which are capable of misinterpretation, she should marshall her good sense to explain in a tactful way that such behavior might arouse disagreeable comment from adults.

It is unjust to make the child feel wicked, when his conduct has no moral significance; but it is fair to tell him that he may be misunderstood and people come to dislike him for behavior which is generally disapproved. With such common sense explanation his behavior should be improved, but his whole future association with the opposite sex will not be discolored and spoiled.

Girls Rough It Up at Uline's

THE roughest sport in which women participate is in full pandemonium at Uline Arena.

The Roller Skating Derby in which male and female teams alternate in whizzing around the track will continue through October 30, by which time there is apt to be a fine collections of cuts, bruises and scars on the ladies' epidermis. Since only tripping and blocking with the hands are forbidden, there's plenty of mayhem. The racers wear crash helmets, shorts and jerseys and are a far cry from the sequin-and-ruffles roller skaters in the figure-skating competitions.

The races start nightly at 8:30 and last until a little after 11 p. m. As a test of stamina and endurance, the derby has few equals. It's considered a cross between the six-day bicycle races, ice hockey and football.

Women and children often make up the majority of the audience at derbies held around the country, and TV set owners who became fans through that medium are especially avid spectators at the "live" event. Season tickets are sold in addition to the singles, because almost everybody who goes once wants to go back again and again.

The lady skaters say the sport is wonderful for the figure.

Ask Anne About Uses of Celery Root

What is celery root and how should it be prepared?
M.L.G.

Celery root is also called celeriac or knob celery. It is a variety of celery with a large turnip-like root. It is often served raw, sliced and seasoned with salt and vinegar as a relish. To cook, cut away leaves and root fibers, pare, and slice or dice. Cook as celery 15 to 20 minutes or until just tender. Drain. Serve with seasonings or melted butter. Or it can be served as a cream vegetable. Allow 3 to 4 roots for 6 portions.

Is sour cream that has soured by itself in one's icebox the same as cream purchased in a store, and may it be used in the same way in cooking? M.L.G.

If the sour cream which has soured in the refrigerator has a clean, sharply acid odor and flavor it can be used exactly as you would use commercially soured cream. If, however, it has unpleasant odor and flavor, it should not be used. It seems that putrefactive organisms develop more rapidly than lactic acid organisms at refrigerator temperatures, and more often than not cream soured in the refrigerator is "off" in flavor.

If you wish to use home soured cream, it is best to remove the cream from the refrigerator and let it stand at room temperature over night or for 24 hours to sour it.

Due to a lack of indoor space we have to keep our girls' two new bikes on the porch. We are afraid rain and other bad weather will ruin them. Could you suggest any waterproof covering that we could purchase that isn't too expensive?
L. S. M.

Stores which sell Army and Navy surplus have two types of materials which you could use. They have a waterproofed dark brown canvas which they used to cover machinery. This sells for 9 cents a square foot. Or a cover made of medium brown pliofilm would be slightly less expensive but equally satisfactory. A size to cover two bicycles would cost about $3.95.

One store which carries both of these coverings can be reached by calling Republic 2545. Ask for Mr. Rose.

We have two green chairs that have become faded. I had them covered with plastic covers thinking that these protected them from the sun. I was careless about closing the blinds and the result is they are faded on the arms and backs of the chairs. Is there any way of touching up these faded portions?
M. C.

I'm sorry, I know of no safe way to add color to the faded spots. Perhaps you could improve the appearance of the chairs by placing matching or contrasting pieces of new material over the arms and backs of the chairs. Cut the pieces oblong for the arms and square or oblong for the backs and finish the edges nicely. Or, you could use crocheted or embroidered pieces. Attach them to the upholstery by lightly tacking at the corners and center sides.

Please advise on the preservation of olive oil in the can. Can anything be done to restore freshness once rancidity is present? B. W. K.

As with most fats, olive oil should always be kept in the refrigerator after the container has been opened. It should be kept in a tightly covered container, preferably glass, to prevent absorbing odors and flavors from other foods.

There is no satisfactory way to remove the odor and flavor of rancidity from olive oil.

What will remove stains of evaporated milk and water from cotton shirts and nightgowns?
S. Y.

If the stains have not been ironed in, they can probably be removed by using a household bleach. Let them soak in a solution of one cup of bleach to a gallon of water for 20 to 30 minutes. Wash and rinse thoroughly.

Can you please tell me in your column how to treat a marble top coffee table? I have used the table on several ocasions for serving coffee and cocktails. The table is now ringed with prints of coffee cups and possibly spilled alcohol spots. I have tried washing it with ivory soap and water and have had little success in removing the spots.
D. D. D.

These spots can be easily removed by rubbing the table top with a scratchless cleaning powder. Sprinkle the powder on the marble, rub it with a soft, damp cloth, and rinse thoroughly. Buff dry.

Could you tell me whether an amateur could "paper" a wall with chintz. If so, how to go about it—would wall paper have to be removed? M. B.

"Papering" a wall with a fabric would not be as easy for an amateur as it would be to put on a regular wall paper. When wet with paste, the chintz would become soft and difficult to hang without developing wrinkles.

Had you thought of the possibility of using a wall paper with a chintz-like design? There are many of these now, and they have all the charm and quaintness of real chintz designs.

When there is only one layer of wall paper on the wall and it is firmly attached and in good condition, it does not need to be removed before hanging new paper over it. If, however, there are two or more thicknesses of paper on the wall, all should be removed to the bare plaster.

For detailed suggestions on hanging the paper, I suggest you obtain some such book as the "Complete Home Encyclopedia" by Dorothy Pace (Claxton House) at a library or book store. This book includes helpful sketches and information on the subject.

New Book Covers Sub-Teen Clothing

The psychological, economic, and artistic aspects of clothing for children up to 12 years of age are brought together for the first time in a new book to be published October 17. Written by Henriette M. Thompson and Lucille Rea, two prominent home economists and clothing specialists, the book is entitled "Clothing for Children." John Wiley & Sons are the publishers.

The book will serve mothers as a handy guide in selecting, making, and remodeling the articles of clothing worn by their youngster children. This age group, say the authors, has been neglected as far as literature on clothing is concerned, although many books and articles on wearing apparel for adults and teen-agers have been written. Miss Thompson and Miss Rea have incorporated the results of several studies that have been made recently on various aspects of their subject. They have also included valuable information on integrating children's clothing needs with family budgets.

Utilities Blocked In Power Attack

By Robert S. Allen

President Truman came within a hairsbreadth of losing his hard-won victory on his big public power program in a closed-door parley of a House-Senate conference committee.

Only the firm stand of three Democratic Congressmen blocked a wily, last-minute scuttling maneuver by the utility lobby.

They are Representatives Mike Kirwan (Ohio), Clarence Cannon (Mo.) and Henry Jackson (Wash.).

Obscured by the clatter of the hectic congressional drive to adjourn, the undercover battle raged unnoticed for two ways. Leading for the utilities were Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) and Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.) from the only all-public power State in the Union. Potently aiding them was a swarm of utility lobbyists, headed by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.

Members of Congress also reported receiving telephone calls from influential persons in home areas urging acquiescence in the utility move.

Had this move been put over, it not only would have cut the ground out from under the President's program, but, in effect, would have set up a new policy on the sale of power from public-built dams without direct action by the House and Senate.

Adroit Move

It was one of the most adroit and far-reaching backstage lobby maneuvers attempted in a long time.

(Note: In the closing days of a session, some of the most important decisions of Congress are being made in the secrecy of the so-called House-Senate conference committees. These bodies, made up of small groups from the two chambers, meet behind closed doors to iron out differences on major measures. Conference committees are subjected to tremendous lobbyist pressures and manipulations of all kinds.)

Administration leaders first got wind of the utility's scheme when Senator Thomas sprang it at the initial meeting of the conferees.

Up to that time, the Administration rested confidently on its decisive victories in the House and Senate. Under the leadership of Representative Kirwan, the House, early last spring, overwhelmingly approved the President's power program.

Several months later, the Senate Appropriations Committee, in a secret meeting, struck the program out of the Interior Department budget bill. Later, after a hot fight, the Senate, by a big majority, reversed this action and restored the program. Senator Thomas was utility spokesman in this battle.

With these two smashing victories, White House leaders assumed they had nothing to worry about. They learned differently at the first meeting of the conference committee.

Seconded by Wherry, Thomas uncorked the new maneuver. It not only caught the Administration by surprise, but was so deftly worded that it won the support of two Senate conferees who had previously voted for the program. They are Senators Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.) and Joe O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.).

The wily utility proposal required no additional legislation.

Instead, it consisted of a "statement of policy" that, after approval by the conference committee, would have had binding effect on the Interior Department.

Under this directive the Government would have been barred from selling power developed at public hydroelectric projects except through private utilities at their rates.

At Utility Rates

That is, distribution of cheap public power would have stopped at the bus bar. From then on, the utilities would sell it at their rates to consumers. The adroit secret proposal was as follows:

"The Department of Interior has stated during the hearings on this bill that its policy with respect to arrangements for the delivery of power produced at hydroelectric projects for delivery beyond load centers is to make wheeling arrangements where . . . (three alleged conditions exist) . . . the conferees direct that a report be made not later than January 15, 1950, as to what progress has been made . . . with private utilities to obtain contracts which conform to this policy."

Interior Department heads hit the ceiling when they read this. They denied as completely false the claim made regarding their testimony, and challenged Thomas and Wherry to produce the transcript of the hearings to prove their contention. Interior chiefs also charged the utility proposal was drafted by Purcell Smith, $65,000-a-year lobbyist of the National Association of Electric Companies.

The final session of the conferees was stormy. Thomas and Wherry fulminated at length. Kirwan, Cannon and Jackson stood pat. They held the whip hand and used it. Under House rules, a majority of a House conference group is necessary to approve such a declaration of policy. The utilities lacked that majority, as the six House conferees split evenly on the issue.

By that hairline margin, the President finally nailed down his big public power program in the West, Southwest and Southeast.

The other conferees who voted for the proposal were Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) and Representatives Ivor D. Fenton (R., Pa.), Ben F. Jensen (R., Iowa) and W. F. Norrell (D., Ark.).

President Truman was so elated he telephoned Kirwan and warmly thanked and congratulated him.

One on the Aisle—

Elmer Rice Writes On Stage's Waste

By Richard L. Coe

IF YOU WANT a realistic picture of the New York theatrical world, don't miss "The Show Is On," the novel by Elmer Rice published today.

The playwright has not written a first-rate novel, but what a grand picture he's drawn of the American theater. Our unbelievable waste of talents, the virtually incredible system which so accidentally permits such glories as "Death of a Salesman" and the intricate web of chance that dogs the art of the stage are set down by Rice with clarifying anger.

No, it's not a good novel, but then there are darned few good novels about the theater. J. B. Priestley's "Good Companions" is my idea of the best. Maugham's "Theatre," Tarkington's "Presenting Lily Mars" and Sinclair Lewis' "Bethel Merriday" aren't memorable. Ever noticed how much better opera folk fare in novels? Willa Cather wrote a great one in "Song of the Lark" and Gertrude Atherton a good one in "Tower of Ivory." Alma Gluck's daughter, Marcia Davenport, wrote a honey in "Of Lena Gayer." Why doesn't Bernard Shaw try another novel, this time about theater?

Rice traces the life of a play from its inception to its premature closing, touching on all the insanities of our theater. How the system affects the lives of the playwright, the players and the management is the novel's theme.

Yes, this experienced playwright is preaching and his novel as writing suffers the disadvantage of such fiction. But the settings and people are thinly disguised and here you have a man who's made his way in the theater expressing what has been pent-up inside him for years. As a preacher, he offers also a sound solution, establishment of state or municipal theaters.

Of a play's production, one of Rice's most interesting characters, a literary agent, has this to say:

"Everything is started from the beginning — scenery, costumes, lighting, equipment—as though no one had ever done a play before; and with an appalling waste of time, energy and money. And when the play closes, whether it runs a day or a year, everything is finished. The actors are disbanded, the scenery is burned, the costumes sold to the ragman. And with the next play the whole process is repeated all over again. Nothing is learned, nothing is saved, there is no permanence, no continuity, no program, no pattern, no objective, no ideal.

"It is all waste, waste, waste, like cutting down the forests, like exhausting the rich soil, like allowing the great flood waters to go unrestrained and the garbage pails to overflow with the sustenance of a starving world."

His hero, a sensitive country lad, sees his play received as "promising," "rewarding" and "one should see" by the critics. Word of mouth brings appreciative audiences. Then on the whim of the theater owner, after a blizzard has put the box office receipts below a high "stop clause" two stanzas in a row, the actors are out of work, the playwright without income.

Perhaps I admire this book so much because Rice is reflecting the very things I've observed in my considerably less august capacity. The incidents he recites, the "stop clause" closings, the happenstances of casting and the vicious personal animosities all have their counterparts in recent theater history. The contempt of the Broadway parasites for the rest of the Nation and for an art which will outlive them is all too accurately detailed.

Through his alter ego, the literary agent, Rice describes how this staggering waste of native talents could be avoided:

"I have been nearly 30 years in America and have heard nothing but talk about efficiency and what is called, I believe, know-how, but I have never got used to the miracles of inefficiency and don't-know-how that I see performed in the American theater.

"In Europe a brilliant director like Leroy Thompson (a leading character) would be the regisseur of an established state or municipal theater. He would have at his command a permanent company of trained actors and a permanent staff of technicians, all accustomed to working together in the closest coperation. Your play would have been read and discussed many weeks, perhaps many months, and the actors would come to the first rehearsal thoroughly familiar with every line of the text and saturated with the parts they are to play."

That ocurs on page 167 of Rice's angry 472. He's dished in surface characters, required romantic tangles, spicy scenes, sentimental situations. But so vividly has he recreated the vicious body of the American theater, the book takes life from his vitality.

As a neat touch of authenticity, Rice dedicates this first novel of his in some time "To my associates in the Playwrights' Company and to the memory of Sidney Howard." His fellow playright-producer should be honored and I hope a whale of a lot of people read "The Show Must Go On."

"THE SHOW MUST GO ON." By Elmer Rice. Viking Press. $3.50.

Weird Navy Jargon Designed For Efficiency—So They Say

NYHT News Service

Something new has been added to the language of the United States Navy.

Long famed for its use of seagoing jargon—starboard means right and the galley is a plain kitchen—the new Navy "talk" is supposed to simplify—save time and money. As listed in Armed Force, unofficial service publication, examples of the new lingo follow:

"Bagair," as anybody can see at a glance, means: "While traveling via air, baggage to accompany is authorized."

"Dusoda,' another of what the Navy calls "phrase equivalents," signifies: "For duty or such other duty as may assign."

"Ford" does not stand for a make of automobile, but to the Navy now means: "Request names officers as ordered."

In the naval wing at the Pentagon "supcorgreeserve" stands for:

"Students ordered to the Naval Supply Corps School are required to submit a written agreement to the Bureau of Naval Personnel not to resign during the course and upon completion of the course to serve in the naval service for a period of two years. Prior to carrying out these orders, directed to submit such a statement or otherwise decline the instruction by written letter and return these orders for cancellation."

It could not be learned whether the Navy plans to publish a "phrase equivalent" dictionary for the benefit of personnel who might confuse "bagair" with "supercorgreeserve" or "ford".

Not to be outdone, Army officers have announced that the war games scheduled for Hawaii late this month will be operated on such a realistic basis that the "enemy" will speak a foreign language. They have declined to name the language.

Mad Slayer Of 13 Thinks He Must Die

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 9 (AP).—The mad killer of 13 persons, unaware he has been declared insane, stares at the bare walls of his hospital cell today—patiently awaiting a walk to the electric chair.

But Howard B. Unruh, 28, will not have to take that walk. He is in solitary confinement at New Jersey State Hospital. That's where he probably will live out his life.

Doctors haven't told Unruh he's insane—nor do they plan to tell him.

A hospital official said Unruh is sure he is going to be executed soon for the slaughter in Camden, N. J., last September 6.

He has written out his "last request," for a turkey dinner "with cranberry sauce and stuffing and all the trimmings, and pie for dessert."

Dr. Harold S. Magee, medical director of the institution, said Unruh will remain in solitary confinment until it is decided that he will not harm anyone.

"He will not be turned loose on the streets," Dr. Magee said, "that's positive."

That brought slight satisfaction to several survivors of Unruh's victims.

Said Mrs. Alexander Tanski: "We feel that he never should be freed from the institution. Sending him to the chair never will bring our family back."

She spoke for her brother who lost his wife, her son and mother-in-law.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Day, whose husband was slain, said angrily that Unruh "should have gotten the chair."

"It makes me boil," Mrs. Day said, "that we will have to support him for the rest of his life."

Mrs. Madeline Harris, wounded by Unruh, thinks Unruh is faking insanity.

Pact Nations' War Games Start Today

Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 9 (AP).—Roads leading to the Paderborn area were choked tonight with troops, tanks and vehicles moving up for realistic war exercises involving soldiers and airmen of five Atlantic Pact nations.

The British Second Division and detachments from the American, French, Norwegian and Belgian armies are taking part in the biggest training maneuvers since the war. The games begin Monday and last until October 14.

British and American Air Force groups are supporting the 45,000 soldiers involved in the battle between two mythical countries, "Redland" and "Blueland."

Representatives of 26 nations will observe the maneuvers, but none from Russia or her satellites.

Nehru to Receive Lavish Reception

By the United Press

American officials yesterday completed preparations to welcome Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, the Asian leader whose support they seek in stemming the Red tide in Asia.

Nehru, spiritual and political heir of the late Mahatma Gandhi, arrives here Tuesday aboard President Truman's personal plane, the Independence.

A lavish official reception is planned during his four-day visit.

President to Meet Him

The President, members of his Cabinet and an honor guard composed of members of all the military services will be at the airport to greet the Indian leader on his first visit to the United States.

The President and Mrs. Truman will honor Nehru at a state dinner at Blair House the same evening, touching off a round of official talks and social affairs in honor of the visiting premier.

Nehru then will leave on a three-week tour which will take him to major cities across the country with two brief side trips to Canada.

India's Support Sought

American officials make no secret of the fact that they consider India to be the most powerful nation in Asia, and want it on the side of the West in the ideological cold war against Russia in the Far East.

Nehru has flirted with Marxist doctrines in the past. But in recent months he has taken strong measures against India's Communists, jailing thousands of their leaders as representatives of "anti-social forces bent upon destroying us."

His original hope of keeping India neutral in the cold war appears to informed observers to have undergone some modification in recent days. But there still is a feeling here and in London that he does not agree with the Anglo-American view that communism is a world menace.

Bales Leads Orchestra At Gallery

By Richard Keith

The National Gallery Orchestra, under the direction of Richard Bales, played a concert last night at the National Gallery of Art. As is usual when the orchestra plays, a large audience attended.

Of special interest on the program was a new arrangement by Bales of two keyboard pieces by the early English composer, William Byrd. Although far removed from the original composer's simple intent, the arrangement and the performance were in good taste.

The orchestra followed this with a fine interpretation of Haydn's great "London" Symphony. Choosing easy tempos and not forcing nuances, Bales, very wisely, let the work play itself.

After intermission a suite taken from Miklos Rosza's music for the film, "The Red House," was given its first Washington performance. Like most movie music, it sounds rather pointless when divorced from the story. It is good movie music though, and conjures up in the listener's mind images of elaborate titles and credit lines fading into each other, idyllic trysts, and cosmic sunsets.

Robert Ward's gentle, blues-like "Night Music" was also included on the program.

The orchestra played throughout with precision, fine tone and good balance.

Phillips Gallery

At the Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon, the Eisenberg Quartet, composed of four young women, played three works for string quartet.

Alexandre Tansman's Triptych, which opened the program, is a convincing and highly original work despite its tendency to be unnecessarily repetitious at some points. It received a careful and sympathetic performance.

The profound B flat Major Quartet of Mozart was a little too much for yesterday's players and suffered in terms of intonation, precision, and unity. The program concluded with the Brahms A minor quartet.

All four musicians are good performers and, for such a young group, play remarkably well with each other.

Life Memberships Set for Presidents Of Junior Chamber

The board of directors of the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday voted to confer life memberships in the JCC to 19 past presidents of the organization. Engraved certificates will be presented to the 19 in a ceremony later this fall.

The past presidents are: Robert W. Wilson, 1934; Corcoran Thom jr., 1935; Albert E. Conradis, 1936; John S. Bleecher, jr., 1937; Lyle F. O'Rourke, 1938; Minor Hudson, 1939; A. Z. Foster Wood, 1940; Harold D. Fangborner, 1940-41; Millard F. West, jr., 1941; Geoffrey Creyke, jr., 1941-42; Bernard J. Nees and Preston W. Grant, 1942-43; Winfield Weitzel, 1943-44; Jack Morton, 1944-45; Carl D. Ford and Robert Wise, 1945-46; L. W. Lauder, 1946-47; James S. Beattie, 1947-48, and Frank E. Davis, 1948-49.

Home Show Seen By Over 25,000

Attendance at the third annual Horse Show Exposition now being held at the National Guard Armory has already passed the 25,000 mark and is expected to surpass last year's total of 83,000, exposition director, James W. Pearson, said last night.

The most popular attractions during the first two days of the exposition, Pearson said, have been the fashion shows daily at 4 p. m.; the Government employes talent show nightly at 9:45 p. m.; the $125,000 minature railroad exhibit, and of course the free baby sitting service. The exposition will close Sunday.

Two Held in Red Fight

London, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Two men were arrested today when a fight broke out among 5000 Communist demonstrators at a Trafalgar Square rally. No injuries were reported.

Woman in Baby-Sale Case Held for Assaulting Police

New York, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—A 44-year-old woman allegedly connected with the sale of unwanted babies was placed under $1000 bail today by Magistrate Vernon Riddick.

But the charge did not deal with a black market in infants. Instead, Mrs. Bess Bernard was accused of assault on the officers who came to arrest her.

Detective William Boehm said that when he pulled a little notebook from Mrs. Bernard's handbag she attacked him, scratching and kicking. He said she snatched the notebook and flipped it over his head to her father.

The 60-year-old man, identified only as Mr. Weiner, caught the "pass," bolted out the door and outran detectives. Mrs. Bernard was booked for assault and violation of two sections of the penal code for hindering the officers.

Magistrate Riddick paroled her on the two penal code charges, but continued the assault count until October 25.

Assistant District Attorney Ernest Mitel charged that Mrs. Bernard definitely is connected with Attorney Irwin Slater in placement of Florida babies in New York homes. He said unwed mothers and sterile couples depend on lawyers for the delicate deals involving disposal and adoption of infants.

Meanwhile, Slater defended the interstate traffic in babies as being not only legal but honorable.

A hearing is set November 4 on charges that the lawyer transported children here from Miami for fees as high as $200. He is accused formally of violating a New York welfare law dealing with adoptions and is free under $1000 bond.

Chinese Reds' Constitution A Dictatorship

By The Associated Press

The Chiness Communists yesterday broadcast the text of their constitution, disclosing their new "people's republic" as a highly centralized dictatorship.

This organic law calls for creation of an "all-China people's congress through universal suffrage" at some unspecified future time.

Meanwhile, it provides that the political consultative conference which set up the government on October 1 shall act in lieu of the congress.

This conference chooses the central people's government council, consisting of a chairman, six vice chairmen, a secretary-general and 56 members.

The council, of which Mao Tze-tung is chairman, is empowered to enact and interpret all laws and decrees, see that they are executed, handle all international affairs, decide on war or peace, control state finances, and appoint all subordinate national governing bodies.

The state administration council, headed by Chou En-lai as Premier, is empowered to run the country in the minutest detail, even down to appointment of "administrative personnel of the county and municipal level and above."

The central council also has power to amend or alter the organic law at any time the political consultative conference is not in session.

1300 Children Going to Israel Held in Camps

Jaffa, Tel Aviv, Oct. 7 (Delayed). Moshe Kol, head of the youth immigration department of the Jewish Agency said that because of overtaxed facilities in Israel, transit camps are being established in Europe to prepare young people for life in their new home.

Twelve institutions with 1300 children are operating in France. They serve as reception centers for children from Turkey, Morocco and Tunis. About 50 percent of the inmates are orphans, many suffering from illness and malnutrition.

"In Morocco, upwards of 15,000 Jewish children are left with no education, and trachoma, tuberculosis and other diseases decimate the Jewish population," Kol said. "To rescue these children, the Jewish people must mobilize all its forces and the Christian world must come to our assistance."

Fire-Breather on H Street . . .

ON A PAPER MONEY DIET—A gyrating dragon, kept moving by firecrackers and beats on a big red drum, moves through Washington's Chinatown on the eve of "Double Ten" Day, anniversary of the Chinese republic

Lion Parade Fetes Chinese Independence

A fiery-eyed, snarling dragon writhed its way through Washington's Chinatown last night as a reminder of the annual Chinese Independence Day observance today.

Weaving from sidewalk to sidewalk on H st. nw., between 5th and 7th sts., the multicolored beast was kept gyrating by a combination of exploding firecrackers, beats from huge red drum, the clanging of many cymbals, and taunts from the crowd of several thousand.

The dragon's appearance was primarily to obtain a diet of greenbacks, in the form of donations, dangling from various firms in the block. Chinatown's unofficial mayor, George Moy, secretary of the On Leong Merchants' Association, said the money would be used to aid the present Chinese Nationalist government.

Its secondary purpose was to usher in "Double Ten," Day, the anniversary of the outbreak of the Chinese Revolution in 1911 when the monarchy was overthrown. The revolution was primarily instigated by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the George Washington of China.

The dragon has been munching paper money for a long time in Chinatown, Moy said. One year, it digested over $10,000 for China relief. The take yesterday was mostly in the form of $5 to $100 bills, and is expected to amount to several thousand dollars, an official estimated.

The ceremony got under way shortly after dusk with the beating of a red drum on wheels in front of the Hip Sing Association headquarters, 507 H st. nw. From out of the doorway leaped the dragon. Children screamed at its ferocity; adults yelled on general principles. It was a happy occasion.

Although the younger Chinese element referred to the center of attraction as a dragon, the older generation, smiling condescendingly, pointed out that it was really a lion, Chinese style.

Part of today's celebration of the "Double Ten" Day will be a tea party given by the Chinese Embassy at "Twin Oaks."

Czech Arrest Wave Directed At Underground Network

Prague, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—A Communist source said privately today the week-long wave of arrests throughout Czechoslovakia was an attack "against the biggest underground network uncovered since the Communist Party came into power."

So far between 2500 and 7000 people—mostly lawyers, doctors and small businessmen—have disappeared in Prague, according to well-informed sources. Arrests occurred throughout the country and new ones were reported today.

The Communist source, who was in a position to know but who cannot be identified, said the roundup was the biggest ever organized by the Communist government.

He said the government believed the American Army Counterintelligence Corps would be implicated.

He said the government was determined to get the ringleaders of the anti-Communist net and stamp it out once and for all.

(The Vatican radio said tonight that Czechoslovak police have thrown a cordon around Svatyian Podskalon, a town of about 1000 residents where a Catholic college for school teachers is located. The Vatician report said the purpose of the cordon was not yet known.)

[Czechoslovakia is preparing a children's version of war games to be staged near Prague October 23, the Communist organ, Rude Pravo, announced today.

[The "maneuvers" will involve some 3500 members of the Prague district "Pioneers," a children's organization whose members range from 11 to 15 years.]

Czechs Starting To Learn Russian

Prague, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Hundreds of thousands of Czechoslovaks, children and graybeards, embarked today on a Communist-directed campaign to learn Russian in double-quick time, with prizes for the fleetest.

It was probably the greatest effort in modern history to teach an entire nation a foreign language and it reflected the efforts of Czechoslovakia's government to turn the nation's face east.

"Russian is the language of the future," proclaimed the cultural newspaper Lidove Noviny. "You can't understand the future without it."

Snow-Bound Deer Hunters Believed Safe

By The Associated Press

Alarm about hundreds of deer hunters who were caught in Saturday's heavy snow subsided Sunday. The snow, heaviest in the mountains of Idaho, western Montana and western Wyoming, caused one death—that of Mrs. Lois Schrechengost, 27, of Rose Lake, Idaho.

Virtually all of the blocked roads in the higher Idaho regions were reopened. The fall of snow stopped over Idaho, but more was forecast for Monday.

Snow fell Sunday in the higher regions of Utah, Colorado, and extreme western Nevada. At Fort Bridger, Wyo., there was 14 inches of snow still on the graund.

The flood which drowned one person in the Houseton, Tex., area, subsided from choked rivers and bayous as no new rains fell.

Many Houston families were going back to their homes in the southwest and northwest sections of town Sunday.

Geisha Girl's Service Nets Her Compensation

Tokyo, (Monday) Oct. 10 (A.P.).—An intoxicated geisha girl injured in an automobile accident after escorting a patron home is entitled to benefits under the workers' accident insurance law.

The Japanese labor ministry handed down this ruling today in the case of Miss Hisa Tsukamoto of the Shinkiraku Restaurant:

"Judging by the special nature of the service of the girl, the accident referred to may be regarded as her occupational accident."

Tampa Packed With Spanish War Veterans

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—More than 500 veterans of the Spanish-American War crowded into this port city today where many of them embarked 51 years ago for the battlefields of Cuba.

The againg veterans of such battles as Santiago Bay, San Juan Hill and Manila Bay were here for the fifty-first encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans organization.

The five-day encampment began with a memorial service and an address by Federal Judge Lynn McCord of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, Montgomery, Ala. He warned the delegates to be on guard "against outside forces that seek to destroy our Nation."

Other speakers will include Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) and Col. John M. Andrews of the Veterans Administration in Washington.

Policeman Kills Man Reported Resisting Arrest

An Upper Marlboro, Md., town policeman last night shot to death a man who, he said, was resisting arrest.

The policeman, Thomas E. Curtis, 41, admitted to reporters the shooting of Andrew Smith, 35, of Upper Marlboro but would give no further information except to say Smith was resisting arrest.

Smith was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital where he had been taken in the Upper Marlboro Rescue Squad ambulance. Hospital authorities said he had been shot through the heart. Curtis was treated for minor bruises.

Upper Marlboro police officials said they had no knowledge of the affair.

Conscience Hurts Him, Admits Killing Pair

Milwaukee, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Wallace E. Skiba, 26, walked into a police station tonight and confessed drowning two playmates 15 years ago because "my conscience bothered me."

Skiba said he pushed the youngsters into the Milwaukee River because he was angry with them. He recalled that one of the victims was named Vogel.

Police records revealed that Robert Vogel, 7, and Stephen Muraszewski, 8, drowned in the river June 8, 1935. No violence was suspected at the time, they said.

Skiba was held for investigation.

Editor Parker Held Improved

Condition of George B. Parker, sr., 63, editor in chief of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, who is critically ill at Emergency Hospital, improved yesterday, according to Dr. Walter K. Myers, his physician.

Dr. Myers said that though Parker's condition still is critical, an internal hemorrhage from which he has suffered for several days apparently ended yesterday morning, and that blood transfusions were stopped at that time.

He said an appeal for blood donors for Parker on Saturday brought more than 40 volunteers. Supplies now are adequate for any foreseeable emergency, he added.

Pittsburgh Burglar Does It the Hard Way

Officials of the Triangle News Co. found the combination knob had been knocked off and the safe had been drilled and battered today.

The combination code was pasted on a piece of paper on the front of the safe—a precaution the news company thought would discourage safecrackers.

Spain Cuts Dollar Value of Peseta

Madrid, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Spain today juggled her variable exchange rate system, lowering the dollar value of the peseta so that Spanish exporters will be able to sell more while importers can buy less for their money.

Especially hard hit by the new rates, published in the official bulletin, are American automobile exporters. The import peseta for cars was lowered in dollar value from 23.99 to the dollar to 34.67, a decrease of 44 percent.

No changes were announced in tourist rates, which are the only practicable yardstick for estimating the basic change in the peseta's value.

New Hampshire Warden Shot; Search Waged for Assailant

Gilead, Maine, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Search centered around Colebrook, N. H., today for a man who allegedly wounded a game warden at the rim of a woodland pit where two dead cats and a dead dog found buried in peculiar coffins.

The hunted man was William F. Howe of Portland, Maine, a 41-year-old free-lance photographer for whom a murderous assault warrant was issued after Game Warden Roland Abbott, 37, of Bethel was shot in the back Friday.

Abbott and Deputy Sheriff Albert S. Grover were questioning a man they found digging in some woods on his hands and knees when he suddenly pulled a revolver and fired. Then the suspect fled in an automobile after firing a bullet into a tire on Grover's car.

Sheriff F. F. Francis of South Paris said the registration number on the getaway car was that of Howe's and that the description of the digger tallies with that of the Portland man.

Authorities said Howe once owned a pet cat suffering from an incurable tumor. A veterinarian told Howe the cat would die but the man tried to operate on the animal himself, a former associate said.

Police believed Howe may have been experimenting on the animals which were found in the woodland pit. One cat had been buried in a wooden, copper-lined box and another in a three-and-a-half-foot bottle. The dog was buried in a wooden and iron box. All three containers had been sealed with tar.

A filling station attendant at a small town near Colebrook—some 32 miles from Gilead—reported he served a man answering to Howe's description last night. He said he became suspicious at bruises on the man's face and that the man left without waiting for $3 change.

Police theorized the man suffered the bruises in a scuffle with Grover at the time when Abbott was shot. Abbott was reported in good condition at a Rumford hospital.

The Man Who—

Stanardsville Man Is Slain; Friend Held

Standardsville, Va., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—H. G. Moyers, 28, of Standardsville died en route to a hospital in Charlottesville shortly after he was shot at about 11 o'clock last night.

According to G. E. Morris, Greene County sheriff, Moyers was shot once with an Army rifle while he was at filling station in Standardsville.

Winfred Dean, 28, also of Standardsville, surrendered today, Morris reported. Dean is being held in jail in Charlottesville, but no charges have been placed against him.

Morris said a motive for Moyers' slaying has not been established. He said Dean had "trouble with some other partes" shortly before the shooting, but that he never had heard of any difficulty between Moyers and Dean, who were considered good friends.

3 Hagerstown Youths Captured in Chase

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—State police have arrested three Hagerstown, Md., youths on suspicion of burglary after a 10-hour search of a wooded area in which police planes took part.

The youths were identified by police as William C. Turner, 18; his cousin, Donald R. Turner, 19, and James W. Martin, 20.

A State patrolman said he chased the youths' car 3 miles yesterday before they abandoned it and fled into the woods. The car contained a quantity of ammunition and guns, police said. Police Sergt. Paul V. Ryon said each of the youths had a rifle when they ran away.

The car had been reported stolen from Julia B. Hoopes of Hagerstown.

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 8 (U.P.).—A Naval Reserve plane today narrowly missed an automobile that had mistakenly turned onto one of the runways of the Municipal Airport as the plane landed.

Angry officials dashed to the car, but were silenced by an indignant lady driver. "Something is the matter with that plane," she told them, "it just landed in the middle of the highway."

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

TOKYO.—T. Kase, the Harvard-educated political writer who was the spokesman for the Foreign Office when Tokyo surrendered, was aboard the Missouri when the Japanese delegation signed the official surrender. He has written the Japanese story of the war years, "Journey to the Missouri," and Yale University Press will publish it. He now is the political adviser to Yomiuri, the newspaper, and writes a political column once a month. And at regular intervals he must discuss these columns with a group of his readers—the most important readers a Japanese could have. For it is his duty to meet with the Emperor and the Empress, the prince and the princesses, and answer any questions which they may ask him—questions about the U. N., international diplomacy and all events concerning Japan.

The princesses participate, and frequently they will turn the talk to women's fashion. Kase deplored the Western fashions, the new look and the smart hair-cuts now favored by so many young Japanese women. "Too bad, too bad," he lamanted, and as supporting evidence, his eyes darted at the pretty princess clad in the ancient kimona. She beamed, and pretended to study her crimson-polished nails and fingered the wedding-band she was wearing.

Prince Takamatsu, whose name means "Tall Pine," asked about the Pan-Am Stratocruiser flight which was completed from San Francisco in less than 24 hours of flying time. The princess mentioned the fact that they both had boarded the plane earlier that day for a brief flight over Tokyo. "Your trip was smooth?" Takamatsu asked, wonderingly. I assured him that the trip had been a calm one, and that most of the passengers had slept through the brief stop-over at Midway, the historic island whose population only 15 years ago was two lonely men who tended the trans-Pacific cable. The prince confessed that his brief flight had made him airsick because of the quick climb and the steep descent.

I showed him a box of Dramamine tablets I had used, and offered him some, to use when he takes his next flight. He pursed his lips, then settled back languidly again, and asked the rhetorical question: "Another flight? Where? And with what plane?" He mentioned the fact that his movements are circumscribed, and that he no longer has a plane at his disposal. He was a Navy captain during the war and in those years too he was not free to move far from Tokyo. "No, I don't like flying," said Prince Takamatsu. From now on, only a battleship." This was not a rehotrical question. Perhaps he still dreams of a new Imperial Japanese navy.

The Family Scrapbook

By Ernest G. Osborne

"Just Hold His Nose"

Children are probably no more keen about taking medicine now than they were when today's parents were young. One wonders whether there is as much of the holding-the-nose-and-get-it-down-him technique as there used to be. Instead of being accepted as a necessary evil, the taking of medicine was—and probably still is—a major struggle between parent and child. Choking and coughing, the youngster was made to take his medicine.

We know that one of the quickest panic-producing experiences is that of having one's air shut off. That, of course, is what happens when we hold the child's nose and fill his mouth with medicinal liquid. Granted that medicine must be taken, there seem to be better, though perhaps slower, ways of getting results.

Did you ever take astor oil in desirable today. But it did go orange juice? For the most part castor oil isn't thought to be too down quite well layered in between layers of juice. Other medicines that are offensive to the taste can be downed with relative little protest if this method is used.

It is surprising, too, how often even fairly young children will assume the responsibility of taking their own medicine if we put it up to them and aren't too impatient.

What's the Verdict?

INVITED PASSENGER

Q. A freight train struck a buggy, seriously injuring the occupants. The conductor persuaded a farm woman who lived near the scene to get into the caboose, where the injured had been put, to care for them on the way to town, where there was a hospital. On the way into town, the train was stopped so abruptly that the farm women was thrown several feet and injured. She sues the railroad, which denies liability because there has been no showing of carelessness. What result?

A. This case depends on whether the farm woman was a passenger in a technical sense. A passenger, generally, is one who is given transporation in exchange for a benefit received by the carrier. Usually that is the price of a ticket. Such a passenger is entitled to the highest degree of care in operation of the railroad. Passenger trains are expected to be operated more carefully than freight trains. But here the farm woman was conferring a benefit on the railroad by caring for injured people, at the request of its conductor — injured people whom the railroad had taken into its care. She, therefore, was technically a passenger, and was entitled to the highest care with which a freight could be operated. She is entitled to go to the jury on that question F. L. D.

The Deadly Flame

A flame may be a little one . . . But when it starts to grow . . . It can be much more damaging . . . Than all the floods that flow . . . Each sudden spark of fire is . . . A ruthless enemy . . . That tries to smother human life . . . And ruin property . . . And yet it is not difficult . . . For people to prevent . . . If only care is exercised . . . And time is wisely spent . . . If homes are wired properly . . . And trash is put away . . . And if commercial buildings are . . . Protected every day . . . So let us all be conscious of . . . This obligation great . . . And guard against the deadly flame . . . Before it is too late.

BARNABY

Gus has fainted again. . .
Frightened by a mouse.
This case is probably unique in medical history, m'boy— It won't be easy to restore Gus to normal ghastliness—
When I have effected my miraculous cure, I may do a paper on my methods. To read before the next psychiatrist's convention.
Pour some more water on him, Jane.
Nothing happens.
Rest, of course, is the first thing any good physician prescribes. We'll let him sleep. I've just time to catch that excellent movie about a lady psychiatrist at the Bijou. . .

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Silence Is Golden, But Too Infrequent

Mel White of 704 3d st. nw. thinks it's high time we formed an organization to be called SPSMPT.

That's short for "Society for the Promotion of Silence in Moving Picture Theaters."

Mel's suggestion has a great deal of merit. He points out that the society might take up such troublesome matters as:

1. People up front at comedies who laugh so loud and so long that nobody else can hear the dialogue.

2. The crescendos of symphony orchestras which insist on intruding into scenes where dead silence is indicated.

3. People who discuss the gag or sequence just ended, or the probabilities of what's ahead.

I am amazed to find Point 2 in Mel's list. I thought I was the only moviegoer who is driven to distraction by the inept use of background music.

However, the third point should find us in universal agreement. Each movie seat should be equipped with a control panel so that the patron can, by merely pushing a button, drop any neighboring seat into a bottomless pit beneath the theater.

It's the only effective way to deal with people who whisper: "Oh, he's going to tell her husband. I'll bet he tells her husband."

The question of what to do about people who laugh too loud at the comedian's jokes is the toughest of all.

In the old days, the humor was mostly confined to action. Spoken jokes were conveyed in subtitles, which could be read in spite of roars of laughter.

But to go back to subtitles would be to eliminate one problem by creating another.

Then we'd have a return of the "subtitle broadcaster"—the guy who can't read to himself. And that I am not strong enough to take.

LET THERE BE LIGHTS

Johnny Mack of 172 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va., started with:

"There's a speed trap near the Bureau of Engraving that you ought to know about."

Impolitely, I stopped him. "Yep," I sighed, "a number of readers have reported it, but the police always say it's not a trap; they contend they merely patrol their beat as instructed, and happen to nab a lot of hasty Virginians hurrying toward Highway Bridge."

"But there's more to the story than just that," persisted Johnny. "I know that it's pretty hard to draw the line between speed traps and legitimate patrolling.

"But these birds come charging out of their hiding places with their lights off, and the other night I almost hit one of them. That's not good."

You are so right, Johnny. And I'm sure that their superiors do not approve of these tactics. Motorcycle officers are expected to obey all laws except those which must be broken to apprehend a criminal. And they're instructed to patrol their beats, not wait in ambush.

CRITICS

Miriam Maynard of 2139 R st. nw. and Ann Rosen of 130 Irvington st. sw., will no doubt hear from Jim Metcalfe's vociferous fans about this, but nevertheless, here's their parody:

"Each morning as across or may . . . be down we ply our skills . . . compelled to lift our eyes where James . . . J. Metcalfe daily drills . . . Convinced are we they're verses and . . . They rhyme admittedly . . . Iambic is his soul device . . . But is it poetry?"

POET'S CREED

I spend a lot of time with me,
That's why I think I ought to be
The kind of guy
That folks like I
Would like to choose for company;

To cultivate the kind of traits
That honest men abound with,
Until I know
I am a Joe
I'd like to run around with.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

This sales tax business confuses me.

I buy horse meat for my cats. All brands of frozen horse meat are tax free, even when the packages are labeled "Not Fit for Human Consumption."

But all canned horse meat is taxed, even the brands which claim that the contents are "excellent, just as it comes from the can, for hash, stews, casserole dishes, or whenever meat is used."

How come?

Mary Jernegan
1219 34th st. nw.

P. S. I enjoy your column but the puns are awful.

Dear Mary:

Your grocer seems to be the one who is confused. Our sales tax people tell me that it makes no difference whether the horse meat is canned or frozen. It is free of tax if the label says that it IS fit for human consumption; but if the label does not make that statement, the sales tax applies.

Bill

P. S. What puns aren't?

PERSONAL NOTES

Lieut. Comdr. Arlia Morgan Pembroke, Navy Nurse Corps: You're very kind. Thank you.

EAGER BEAVER

One of our better department stores is currently blushing as furiously as any corporate entity can.

It seems that a Washington woman bought a fur coat from the store a few days ago, but didn't want to take it with her just yet. So the saleswgirl suggested that she put it in the firm's storage vaults, where it would be safe. The customer agreed.

But a few days later, the lady got a letter from the store's storage department. It acknowledged receipt of the coat, and suggested that this might be a good time to have the old wrap cleaned and altered into newer and more fashionable lines.

The irate customer hit the ceiling, and called the store. "How come," she demanded, "that a coat I've just bought needs cleaning, and modernizing? What are you people doing to me?"

The explanation is now at hand—but for a while, it looked like a couple of department store executives were about to commit group hara-kiri.

Somebody in the storage department had slipped up, and sent out form letter 3-B.

121,630 HAIRS

Each Morning?

NATURE provided your scalp with the structure necessary to grow 121,630 hairs (average). You kept this amount of hair until dandruff, scalp itch, or other local scalp ills made it difficult for your scalp to replace hair which was lost.

Your scalp needs sound help if it is to maintain its "quota." For 25 years The Thomas' have been helping others to get rid of dandruff, stop abnormal hair-fall, and promote natural hair growth. Thomas can help you, too, to retain your hair or stimulate hair growth. Call today for a free scalp examination.

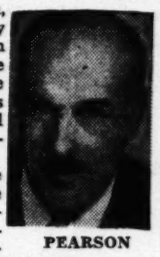
Vaughan Goes for Sea Treasure

By Drew Pearson

In the confidential files of Senator Clyde Hoey's investigating committee is a report on Gen. Harry Vaughan and his partner, John Maragon, in which they seek sunken treasure at the bottom of the sea. And as usual, they pull a lot of political wires.



PEARSON

This is one part of the Vaughan-Maragon investigation that Senator "just-the-usual-procedure" Hoey wants to suppress. It is also a chapter that President Truman is exerting pressure to hush up.

Most interesting phase of the treasure hunt is that the two cut another company out of the deal—despite the fact that the other company had a prior contract to salvage ore in the sunken SS Edward Luckenbach.

Vaughan's friends got the contract without competitive bidding. This was the only case in history where a salvage contract was let without competitive bidding, except one—where the commission did not own the cargo.

The SS Luckenbach, sunk in 60 feet of water off Key West Fla., by a Nazi sub in 1942 was carrying a cargo of tin worth more than two million dollars. The cargo, owned by the United States Government and partly salvaged, now comes under the Maritime Commission and the United States Metals Reserves Corporation, plus a private firm, the Cargo Salvage Corp., of New York. The private firm represents the insurance companies that paid off the Government.

Maragon Throws Weight

Because of this, the private insurance companies, through their agent, the Cargo Salvage Corp., signed a contract November 6, 1947, with Clark Brothers of Palm Beach, Fla., to salvage the cargo. This contract is still legally in effect.

However, one year later, the Maragon and the President's military aide stepped in and pulled the rug right out from under them. They secured a provisional contract to recover the sunken ore for their friends, Robert Stefanich and Zeke Afram of Milwaukee.

General Vaughan used to be a manufacturers' representative in Milwaukee and is a close friend of Harry Hoffman, Milwaukee advertising man. Hoffman is the man who arranged to have the seven deep freezers sent to Mrs. Truman, Vaughan and other bigwigs.

After Truman's Vacation

Shortly after President Truman came back from his Key West vacation in December 1948, Robert Stefanich of Milwaukee, representing the Atlantic Marine Salvaging Co., of Milwaukee, dropped in at the Maritime Commission to see if he could salvage the ship. The commission told him to send a diver down to look at the cargo, after which they would talk to him.

In January, 1949, Stefanich went back, said he had not been able to send a diver down, but wanted a contract for salvaging the vessel just the same. Jerry C. Massey, admiralty counsel of the commission, later reported:

"Since he had not done what he promised, I considered he was wasting my valuable time desperately needed on other Maritime Commission business and making a nuisance of himself. I told him so in so many words.

"Early next morning, to my surprise he walked in with John Maragon.

"In the course of the conversation," Massey continued, "he (Maragon) repeated several times 'I will go back and report to General Vaughan.' I resented this, Maragon gave me the definite impression that he was an employe of General Vaughan. He talked to me in a tone of giving me an order that the contract be given the Atlantic Marine Salvaging Co. I also resented this. The above caused me to express my feelings rather heatedly."

Massey asked two associates, Joseph Tarian and Charles E. Kauffman, to sit in as witnesses if Maragon called again. After the next meeting, Kauffman wrote a report that stated:

"I asked who he (Maragon) represented and he replied. "I'm with the general.' This meant nothing to me so I asked what general and he answered, 'General Vaughan.'"

Gen. Vaughan Telephones

That Vaughan was fully aware of Maragon's activity was indicated later by the fact that he called Massey to make sure that his Milwaukee friends were getting the contract.

Maragon's badgering continued, and Massey describes another meeting in March, 1919. "Maragon's manner was extremely officious and again he talked in a tone of giving me an order to award the contract to the Atlantic Marine Salvage Co."

By this time, the Maragon-Vaughan combination had gone over Massey's head to Admiral Smith, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and to Commissioner Carson. Maragon and Vaughan won out.

The interesting fact is that though the political-minded Maritime Commission approved the Maragon deal, the private insurance underwriters in New York and the RFC have not yet given their approval. It's now a question as to whether the Milwaukee firm with a contract from the Maritime Commission, or Clark Brothers of Palm Beach, with a contract from the insurance companies, have the right to salvage the sunken Luckenbach.
